Beware Untrained Dogs Very Safe Earth Stop Crime? How? Tires Are Our Shoes

—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright, 1922 by Star Co.)

Bismarck, who was dropped overboard by the young Kaiser, compared that Kaiser, it seems, "to an untrained hunting dog that runs around and spoils everything."

That is the worst of monarchy. The people gamble everything on the accidental result of a mixture of germ-plasm.

Somebody selects an untrained young royal woman as the wife of an untrained young royal prince. Then millions of people must take whatever they get as the result of that union.

Republics are not perfect, but at least you can get rid of your untrained dog at the end of four years.

You have heard of the Mexican giant Popocatepetl throwing up lava, smoke, fire, stones and a great noise from volcanic depths. Here's another trouble-maker, Ometepes of Nicaragua, covering grazing lands with ashes, throwing out lava, killing cattle, sending thousands of inhabitants flying.

Such happenings should make us grateful for our average security. The earth underneath our feet is a mass of fire and fury, yet how peacefully we all live—with slight outbreaks here and there, and rarely.

How could you stop crime, holdups, robberies, murders? Everybody discusses it with many suggestions. Long terms in prison, whipping with the lash, one hundred strokes repeated occasionally if the criminal lives, death for highwaymen—are suggested.

When Ravaillac murdered Henry the Fourth, his loving widow strongly recommended the suggestion of a Paris butcher, who guaranteed to skin the criminal so skilfully that he would live after the skinning to endure other tortures.

Nobody suggests torture just now, although once it was supposed to be necessary. Even the innocent were tortured to make them tell what they knew about the guilty.

The only remedy for crime is JUSTICE, even, free from hatred.

The Goodyear Tire Company says it has twenty-five millions cash on hand, and sold more tires in 1921 than in 1920. That is "REAL" prosperity, news. Once you might judge the prosperity of a village by the number of good shoes sold by the local cobbler. Today the nation's real shoes are automobile tires. People travel on tires. The sale of automobile tires and of automobiles tells the story of national prosperity or the lack of it.

Two fine New England boys, Charles and Hamilton Garland, inherited a million and a half. Both refused the money, saying they had no right to take what they never earned. Fine sentiment.

Now one has a baby. The brothers will take the money for the baby's sake.

Nothing like a baby to drive common sense into your head; nothing like several babies to make you work.

It is stupid to leave millions to children, making it possible they will do nothing and therefore be unhappy. But what the world gains by the hard work of men anxious to take care of their children amounts to more than all the foolishness of inherited wealth.

As you run your automobile or other machinery, do you realize how important the right oil or other lubricating substance is? An English expert says more than one-half the power generated in England is wasted in overcoming friction. This should interest American engineers, oil producers, machinery owners.

When you burn coal, half its value goes up the chimney. When you transform steam into electric power you lose half, and then, when the machinery runs, friction of metal against metal cuts down half of the remainder. It's a wonder any power is left. Plenty of chances for inventors to use their brains.

Amundsen is going on a five-year trip to the Polar regions. Men went there once as "stunt" just to say, "I have reached the Pole."

That is over. Amundsen will study Arctic currents and Arctic winds, but not known so much to our weather, ourselves and to our health.

One of these days men will control the winds, control cold ocean currents from the North and hot currents from the South, and for that matter change the badly regulated motions of the earth that cause too much ice in one place and too hot weather at the Equator.

Whatever men can imagine, they can do, and you couldn't imagine them living on this earth for the next ten years without controlling it. They won't always be savages.

$400,000 DIVORCE IN PELLETIER TRIAL

EXTORTION CHARGE BY HOTEL OWNER

Piscopo's Deposition Declares He Paid District Attorney and McIsaac $21,000 After Threats

Charges that District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier aided and abetted in a conspiracy to extort $21,000 from Benjamin Piscopo, former proprietor of the Colonial Hotel and central figure in a $400,000 divorce suit settlement, were presented to the Supreme Court by Attorney-General Allen today in the trial of Pelletier on charges of misconduct in office.

As the case unfolded it became apparent that it was destined to be one of the most sensational of the whole trial.

Allen read the deposition of Piscopo, now of Laconia, N. H., to show evidence of conspiracy.

He declared that the $21,000 was paid to Attorney Daniel V. McIsaac—possibly as a fee to McIsaac for acting as counsel in settling the divorce case, but in reality he was afraid McIsaac and Pelletier "might put something over on him" in connection with the hotel.

Piscopo in his deposition declared that McIsaac at first demanded $35,000. He characterized this as a ridiculous fee for the amount of work McIsaac did.

Piscopo in the course of his deposition made the following statements:

1—That, in Pelletier's hearing, McIsaac urged him, Piscopo, that "Joe" might watch his hotel.

2—That this statement was made when Pelletier and McIsaac together were trying to persuade him to pay the $35,000.

The contested divorce suit of Mrs. Mabel Gallagher of Cambridge came to a sudden end today, following a conference of counsel with Judge Fox in the divorce session of the Superior Court at East Cambridge and Mrs. Gallagher was given a decree nisi against John J. Gallagher. The custody of two children was awarded to Mr. Gallagher's mother.

Mrs. Gallagher charged cruel and abusive treatment, gross and confirmed habits of intoxication and non-support.

She testified that her husband had threatened to shoot her, and that he had struck her and twisted her wrists.

While Mrs. Gallagher was testifying a recess was ordered. Attorney Sletten, for the wife, and Attorney J. J. Tobin for the husband, went to the bench and conferred with Judge Fox. As a result, Mr. Gallagher decided to stop his contest and his wife was granted the decree.

PRESTON DIARY ADMITTED IN LOUD TRIAL

'DRY LAW BROKEN BY JUDGES'

Prohibition Agent Wilson Declares Police and Politicians Also Violate Measure

"Judges, politicians and members of the Boston police department are violating the prohibition law," Prohibition Enforcement Agent Harold D. Wilson declared in a talk today before the Bay State Automobile Association at the Hotel Buckminster.

"I have great difficulty in securing search warrants for places which I have every reason to believe are loaded with liquor," Agent Wilson continued.

"I would rather catch one of you fellows bootlegging than catch twenty-five foreigners." The personal liberty argument has been worked to death since the prohibition law was passed. I want to deny the stories that have been spread around that prohibition officers drink the finest and wantonly violate other laws while enforcing the eighteenth amendment. I have no men on my force who get drunk. If you can show me a man on my force who gets drunk I will remove him in five minutes.

"If I should infer that any one of you gentlemen were not 100 per cent. for law enforcement there would be a roar riot at this meeting and Wilson would be on his way to the Relief Hospital.

"I do not care what happens to me. If I am forced out of office it will be because I have offended those who have no respect for the law.

"At the Quincy House banquet that I raided the liquor was marked 1921. That was the kind of unripe stuff passed around.

"Harvard boys will not drink the vile stuff that is passed around. It was quiet enough in Boston the night of the Harvard-Yale game.

"I seized forty bottles of the meanest kind of liquor in a room in Taunton where there was a statue of Venus. I threw my overcoat over the statue.

"Some persons are selling cans full of water and saying it is moonshine. Others are selling 'tea.' The number of crooks who are palming off vile stuff as liquor is amazing."

EFFICIENCY EXPERTS SUED FOR $300,000

The Sweets Company of America, Inc., has brought suit for $300,000 in the Superior Court for Suffolk County against Harry M. Haven and William W. Crosby, engineering and efficiency experts. The plaintiffs say that in January, 1918, the defendants were allowed to introduce their system in the factory of the plaintiffs at New York city. Machinery which the defendants installed, the plaintiffs say, has no value except as "junk."

BLACK AND TANS QUIT IRELAND

Ordered to Evacuate Tomorrow, Troops Already on Way Home

By DANIEL O'CONNELL
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

Dublin, Jan. 11.—The evacuation of Dublin by the British military forces got into full swing today, while the new provisional government of President Arthur Griffith began to function.

English soldiers began leaving Dublin barracks and it was reported they would be taken on board a troopship tonight or tomorrow.

GENERAL EVACUATION.

The British military forces were today ordered to evacuate Cork, Limerick, Fermoy, Ballyion, Waterford and Ballincollig. Large stores of equipment are being removed.

Official announcement was made at Dublin Castle this afternoon that the auxiliary military police, (Black and Tans) would begin embarking tomorrow.

President Griffith has summoned the Southern Parliament to meet Saturday to affirm Dail Eireann's ratification of the Irish peace treaty.

Officials at Dublin Castle have begun to ship the archives to London. Huge cases of documents, bearing for the most part upon military activities against the Sinn Fein in the past, were carted from the Castle under military escort. They were taken on shipboard for removal to English soil.

Crowds gathered and cheered as the sirns of "Erdbish occupation" began to disappear.

INVITED TO GENOA.

Commenting on the invitation from Premier Briand for Ireland to send a representative to the International Economic Conference at Genoa, President Griffith said: "It is very satisfactory. The Dail cabinet probably will reach a decision upon the matter before tomorrow."

It is learned from trustworthy sources that Irish Republican army commandants from all parts of the country held an important meeting in this city last night regarding the future policy of the Irish army. The military leaders were said to have agreed unanimously to support the new government.

New Government Guards Against Pitfalls

Dublin, Jan. 11 (By the Associated Press).—Arthur Griffith, now president of the Dail Eireann, and his Cabinet assumed today the places to which they were elected yesterday. It was recognized that careful work was necessary, if pitfalls were to be avoided.

The price of the larger sizes of anthracite was cut 50 cents a ton today by Boston dealers. The new prices are:

New York, Jan. 11.—The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey has reduced tank wagon price of gasoline and refined oil one cent a gallon to districts served by the company.

Chicago, Jan. 11.—Six million eggs were dumped on the market today. Wholesale prices dropped 5½ cents a dozen. Fresh eggs retailed from 39 to 40 cents, and storage at 29, new lows for the Winter.

TWO POLICEMEN ON TRIAL FOR ASSAULT

Lockwood and Philbrook Face Accusations by Dorchester Service Man

Ralph P. Lockwood and William Philbrook, Boston policemen, were today put on trial before Judge Fosseden and a jury in the Superior Court for alleged assaults committed on John P. Kenny of No. 19 Washington street, Dorchester, an ex-service man, and Joseph J. Margolis of No. 12 Hansborough street, Dorchester.

On the way to the Lagrange street police station, while riding in a patrol wagon, the complainants say that Lockwood leveled his revolver at Margolis. Kenny says he knocked the butt of the pistol down, and a brother officer pushed Lockwood to "use his bean." After that, it is claimed that Lockwood struck Margolis with the butt of the pistol.

The trouble occurred last Summer on Washington near Avery street. Kenny says as he walked along Washington street an officer, who was dispersing a crowd, pushed him. Margolis stepped up and asked Kenny why he was pushed. The latter says he was explaining to Margolis when Officer Philbrick placed him under arrest. Margolis followed to the patrol box, and was told to "get out" by some person whom Kenny did not know, although he believed it was Lockwood who was in plain clothes.

Lockwood, according to Kenny, told Officer Philbrick that if he didn't arrest Margolis, Lockwood would, and the latter attempted to seize Margolis. The officer did not succeed in getting Margolis until he tried a second time after striking him twice. Margolis admitted that he retaliated in like measure, but says he acted in self-defence.

COUNSEL IN TILT OVER NOTEBOOK

Saltonstall and Feeney Give Arguments for and Against Its Admission

Two mute witnesses occupied the centre of the stage today at the trial of Clarence W. Loud in East Cambridge Superior Court on a charge of the murder of Patrolman James A. Preston of Wakefield.

They were Loud's license to operate an auto and the dead patrolman's diary, which contains Loud's name and that of a woman.

State and defence waged a stubborn battle over the question whether they should be admitted as evidence.

"The operator's license cannot be admitted," declared John P. Feeney, Loud's counsel, "because it was found two hours after the crime and in a police station. No one knew when or how the officer got it. It was not found at or near the scene of the crime."

Attorney Feeney laid stress on his contention that the admission of the diary would be a violation of Loud's constitutional rights.

"I challenge the district attorney to produce any case to show that evidence that has been suggested to you here is admissible," said Attorney Feeney in a ringing voice, pounding the rail with his fist.

Preston's entry of Loud's name in the diary found on the officer's body was in effect his dying declaration, District Attorney Saltonstall declared

STATE OFFICER SILAS SMITH CALLED AS WITNESS

In his argument to Judge Brown that the diary should be admitted as evidence against Loud.

"Patrolman Preston had taken the auto license from the man and had told the man and woman that they must go with him to the police station. Then, when one or the other sought to run away, Mr. Loud whipped out his gun and shot his man," the District Attorney charged.

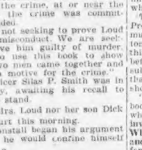
"I shall show by the auto license that the defendant and the deceased had come together and that was therefore an opportunity for Loud to have committed the crime, at or near the time when the crime was committed," he added.

"We are not seeking to prove Loud guilty of misconduct. We are seeking to prove him guilty of murder. I intend to use this book to show that the two men came together and that it is a motive for the crime."

State Officer Silas P. Smith was in court today, awaiting his recall to the witness stand.

Neither Mrs. Loud nor her son Dick were in court this morning.

Mr. Saltonstall began his argument by stating he would confine himself closely to brief. He took up the question of Loud's operator's license first.



DEPT. ATTY. J. C. FOYE

"I shall show by a man named Gagan, a member of the fire department, that the body was wrapped in blankets and taken to the first - aid room at the Wakefield Police Station.

While there the hat fell off and the license fell out," said the district attorney.

"I shall show that Loud's signature on the license was made and acknowledged before the Highway Commission. I shall show by a handwriting expert, Mr. Huntington, that this was Loud's signature."

The district attorney claimed that the evidence the operator's license of Loud) showed that the defendant Loud, and the deceased had come together and that there was therefore an opportunity for Loud to have committed the crime, at or near the time when the crime was committed.

That the license was found in Preston's cap showed that Preston must have taken it from Loud, Saltonstall contended. He said the time this was done must have been shortly before the murder and its presence substantiated the government's claim that Loud and Preston came together shortly before the crime.

"As soon as this license and the book (Preston's diary) was found, what did every police officer, every investigator and every lawman say? Why, at once, they all said: 'It's Loud and no one else'—and Loud was sent for.

"Now, the authorities to support this contention are too numerous to mention. The law covering this point is the same in criminal as in civil cases. I have put in but few of these authorities. My brother has put in many of them.

"Articles known to have been in possession of a defendant and found later near the location of a crime are admissible. It is admissible to show that the defendant Loud was there and had an opportunity to commit the crime.

"Why, it was found on the person of the deceased himself. Almost to state the facts is to state the admissibility of this evidence."

The District Attorney then showed a copy of the rules and regulations of the Wakefield Police Department. He said these regulations had been approved and legally adopted by the Board of Selectmen of Wakefield.

He read from these rules and especially one which ordered police officers to enter all matters of an official capacity, whether these happen on his beat, in court, or anywhere else.

"On April 5 Officer Preston was doing his duty as he had been ordered," said the district attorney. "He was doing his duty, grand soldier that he was; he was following the rules and regulations of the police department of Wakefield.

"Did he act hurriedly or hastily? According to the witness Daley, he was seen listening at the back of a lit. tle closed-in car. Now I don't need to say here to this court nor to these ladies and gentlemen, Your Honor, but the court knows and we all know what was going on in that car. Did he seek to raise notoriety? Seavoury and Harper and that as they approached Officer Preston and the car that he beckoned for them to come on, and they went by. Did he stop them and tell them what was going on? He did not.

"He had taken the license from the man and had told the man and woman they must come with him to the police station.

"Then when one or the other sought to run away at that time Mr. Loud whipped out his gun and shot his man.

LOUD APPEARS BORED.

"We are not seeking to prove Loud guilty of statutory offence. We are seeking to prove him guilty of murder, and I intend to use this book to show that, first, the two men came together and, second, that it is a motive for the crime."

The district attorney opposed the theory of the defence that the defendant's constitutional rights would be violated if the diary were admitted because of the legal right of any defendant to meet his accusers face to face, and have the right to cross-examination.

He cited the instance of a "dying declaration" as against this rule of confrontation, saying that dying declarations were admitted in murder trials. The District Attorney read from "Wigmore on Evidence," and quoted many cases to support the government's theory. He said the diary was an essential and fundamental part of the government's case to show that Loud and Preston came together that night and he knew of no better way to show it than by this diary.

Loud sat in the dock with his arms crossed and his left leg crossed over his right as Saltonstall argued. He put his hand on his chin and watched the newspaper reporters as they wrote rapidly in their efforts to follow the District Attorney in his argument. He seemed bored by the proceedings.

The district attorney submitted his contention that the defendant's constitutional rights were not violated by the introduction of the diary.

"It is as if the officer had taken a pencil and paper and had written his own dying declaration—as this entry was made about five minutes before his death," said Mr. Saltonstall.

"Common sense tells us that the two pieces of evidence found upon this man (Preston) are admissible and the jury should be allowed to pass upon them and the guilt or innocence of the defendant."

Many attorneys sat within the barenclosure and listened with great attention to the district attorney's argument.

FEENEY FIGHTS ADMISSION.

Mr. Feeney at once began his argument, declaring that the District Attorney had studied the case from the wrong angle.

"He treats this case as if evidence in a civil case is always admissible in a criminal case," said Feeney.

"The first question I want to take up is the question as to whether or not an operator's license is admissible."

ATTY. J. FEENEY

He told the court that the Commonwealth's brief cited many authorities in regard to the operator's license, but in regard to the private memorandum (the diary) no authorities were submitted.

"The State says that the evidence has great weight if it is introduced," Feeney went on. "I say that this is the strongest reason why the rules of evidence should be followed before it is admitted. Because it might be a strong bit of evidence is no reason why it should go in."

He took up a discussion of the operator's license. He asked the court for the brief and then read from it.

He quoted denying Mr. Preston's right to say the rulings were similar to the case now before you," decision of the Supreme Court.

"These cases show that the evidence was admitted because it was the property of the defendant and that it was found at the scene of the crime. And that's the important thing here—because it was not found at the scene of the crime.

"In all of these cases given by the government it shows that the defendant either lost the article named or concealed the article mentioned, and they were found near the scene of the crime.

"In one case a key to a room was found, in another a revolver was found and in another a piece of a crowbar was found.

"Are those cases similar to this case?

"Is there any evidence to show when this operator's license got into the possession of the officer? There isn't and there can't be any such evidence.

"How can they say that this is a parallel case?

"Now I don't want to make statements here which are not accurate. I know full well that a key has been ruled admissible. I know that a shirt has gone in as evidence.

"I strongly urge upon this court that you cannot admit that operator's license."

JUDGE QUERIES FEENEY.

"You argue that it was found two hours after the crime?" asked Judge Brown.

"Not only that, but that it was found two hours afterward in the station house. I go further and will say that not only was it found two hours afterward, but it was found at the time when no one knew how long the dead officer had had possession of it.

"I go further and say that it was found when no one knew when and where the officer got it. It was not found at, or near, the scene of the crime.

"I also claim that you cannot use one of those articles to throw light on the other because they are not in parallel cases. There is no evidence the officer secured it. There is no evidence from whence it came and from whom he got it, and there is not a decision which even approaches the proposition that this evidence is admissible.

"This evidence has been likened to a dying declaration. Such evidence must be affirmative in its nature. There is no evidence to show how the police officer got possession of this operator's license.

"If the district attorney contends that the officer took this paper from Clarence W. Loud, then it is not admissible, because the officer had no authority to take the operator's license from him, and it therefore was not legally in his possession.

"If there is an entry in a private memorandum book owned by Mr. Preston and in his handwriting, then it cannot be used against Clarence Loud because it is a violation of Article 12 of the Constitution, which gives the accused the right to meet his accusers face to face and have the right to cross-examine them.

FEENEY RANGS RAILING.

"I object to the district attorney to produce any case to show that evidence which has been suggested to you here is admissible," said Mr. Feeney in a ringing voice, and banging the rail with his fist.

He cited an Alabama case, which he claimed showed a violation of the defendant's right to confront the witness. In this case a man was brought into court on a stretcher so ill that he was near to death. The prosecutor in that case was allowed to ask him one question: "Did you kill George Freeman?" The man answered: "No."

Feeney pointed out that the defendant was deprived of his constitutional right to be confronted with witnesses against him, and also was deprived the right of cross-examination. Feeney said the court upheld the defendant's exceptions.

Attorney George F. McKeigett, an attorney associate of Mr. Feeney's, and a past exalted ruler of Cambridge Lodge of Elks, handed law book after law book to Feeney, who read from them in support of his contentions. Feeney laid much stress on the admission of the diary as a violation of the defendant's constitutional rights under Article 12.

"I urge upon you, Your Honor, the fact that there is an objection to the admissibility of the evidence, because it is in violation of the constitutional rights of the defendant," said Mr. Feeney.

"I want to impress that upon Your Honor," said Feeney, "because my brother has a couple of wandering cases which his claims throw certain light on this question, but in none of which was the question of the violation of the constitutional rights of a defendant raised.

"The only case in the United States which shows that the rule of necessity applies in a criminal case, and I challenge the Commonwealth to produce one."

LAUGHTER IN COURT.

Feeney cited the case of Mace vs. Corkpit in Rhode Island. Saltonstall interrupted to ask Feeney if he had ever been in a cockpit.

"My brother," retorted Feeney, while the court room roared, "if you ask how many times I've seen them, you'd be surprised."

At this point Judge Brown ordered a twenty-minute recess.

"I contend that this memorandum book cannot be received by the jury," said Feeney when court resumed. "I contend that it violates one of the constitutional rights of the defendant. If this notebook is introduced as evidence."

Feeney mentioned something about "dying declarations." Here District Attorney Saltonstall interrupted to say he did not claim the notebook was essentially the dying declaration of the slain police officer.

Attorney Feeney asked the judge if he had read his voluminous brief. The judge replied he had not read it all through, because he had not time. Feeney declared he had labored until 2 this morning and was up again at 5.

Feeney cited the law on dying declarations. "A dying declaration is admissible only so far as it relates to the death, the killing," said Feeney, thumping the rail.

Feeney said: "My brother, Mr. Saltonstall, is entirely wrong in the principles he cites in his cases. The principles of law, he says, must be made by a person with no interest to misrepresent.

"Now, Your Honor, I am not referring to poor Preston, who has passed away. I'm not referring to Mr. Preston, who came from abroad after serving his country, only to be killed.

"You're not defending Mr. Preston's status. You're going to lay down a rule that will protect a defendant from any house evidence. You're going to give officer in the land, be he good or bad."

"Who did the killing? There is nothing in this case I am citing about a statutory offence or auto registration number. I claim this evidence cannot be legally received and will submit three reasons."

At this point the noon recess was taken.

COURTROOM PACKED.

Despite the driving storm, the courtroom was packed when court came in for the afternoon session. The corridors were thronged and Lieutenant Sullivan and others had overcrowded people waiting patiently in the storm outside the court house.

Attorney Feeney resumed his argument on his diary brief and launched into another long recital of points of legal law.

The driving snow played a merry tattoo on the courtroom windows and was so strong that Feeney was forced to raise his voice to be heard above the elements.

LIST SUSPECT SHIPS AS RUM RUNNERS

U. S. Authorities Keep Coast Agents Posted; Find Vessels Change Names

By Associated Press.

Washington, Jan. 11.—A list of liquor smuggling vessels operating in American waters has been compiled by Federal authorities for use in combatting rum runners. It was said today at prohibition headquarters that now enterprises about twenty American and foreign ships.

Names of vessels suspected of whisky smuggling operations, officials said, are reported to headquarters by field agents and a list of the suspected craft is forwarded at intervals to prohibition directors of the States bordering on the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf coasts to aid them in their activities against the illegal entry of liquor into this country.

One of the chief difficulties met by the bureau was said to be the facility with which these craft change their names.

The British schooner Messenger of Peace, seized with a cargo of liquor off the North Carolina coast last week, is among the suspected smuggling craft listed by the department, officials said.

LOWELL MILK DEALERS WAR ON PRICE CUTTERS

Lowell, Jan. 11.—Milk dealers of Lowell are expected to hold a meeting today or tomorrow to take action on the question of whether or not they shall continue to charge thirteen cents a quart, or come down to eleven cents, the price now charged by the Purity Farms Company of St. Johnsbury, Vt., which is doing a tremendous business. Dealers report the loss of hundreds of customers, and it is said to-day all people are operating all their teams and trucks as the orders demand.

TO TAKE STORAGE FOOD FROM NEWPORT

Newport, R. I., Jan. 11.—Plans are being made at Coddington Point for the shipping of the sixty to seventy tons of perishable stores now in cold storage, quantities of which were put in just preceding the threatened railroad strike as a precautionary measure. A transport will come here next week for these goods, and it is understood that San Diego, Cal., will be the final destination.

SUGGESTION OF THIRD DEGREE IN LOUD CASE

Feeney Has Silas Smith Tell of Ordeal to Which Accused Was Submitted

By HAZEL CANNING.

A picture, none too pretty, this seventh day, was suggested by Attorney John P. Feeney, chief counsel for Clarence W. Loud, accused of the murder of James Preston, Wakefield policeman.

That picture, at first faintly limned, in driving questions of the counsel for defence, will probably stand out in fiercest black and white, pitiless, clean cut, emphatic, when Attorney Feeney is through his cross-examination of State Police Officer Silas Smith today.

The picture smacked of mediaeval superstitution. It called up horrible ancient torture. It more than a little related itself to our own prize page of history—the outrages of the Salem witchcraft. Now, mind you, the picture, and the thing, were never directly spoken, by witness or by defence.

But irrevocably, pitilessly, accusingly, with forging voice and pointed finger, the picture was painted there, for the jury to see. And that picture was the picture of a weak, dazed man, in the sickly hours before dawn, removed from his silent cell, led through the cool night to a dark room, and confronted, suddenly, as lights flashed on, with a nude body.

BIT OF THIRD DEGREE.

Attorney Feeney slipped and reshaped his questions, pointing to a bit of a third degree, on the part of that veteran police "Bill" Smith, and Chief Pollard, of the Wakefield police.

What hour was it Loud was taken from his cell and led to the room, where the body of Preston"

"Three o'clock," replied the witness.

"Sure it wasn't five in the morning?" asked Feeney.

"Did you tell him where he was going? Did you take him into the room and then flash on the light, where the dead body lay? Was Preston lying there, under the sheet, nude? Did you fold back the sheet down to his waist? Did you tell Loud where he was going, when you got him? Whose idea was it to take Loud from his cell for that purpose—Officer Si Smith's?"

So Feeney pressed the witness, upon Chief Pollock, of Wakefield. And, so pressing, the quiet man, in the dock, leaned forward, took off his glasses, cleaned them, and put them on the better to face his accusers. Mrs. Loud, too, moved in her chair, paying strict attention, while the none too pleasant picture stood out clearer and better defined, under the hands of the questioning Feeney.

DID SHE REMEMBER.

It was to wander if the little woman of the quiet ways, knew her history well enough to remember how, in days of old, when a murder had been committed, the accused was led into the chamber of death. How, in days related to the Inquisition the wounds of the victim, were supposed to open, when the murderer came into the presence. How, in these terrible, robust, pitiless old days, honest witnesses arose, later to swear by all that they prayer to, that the wounds did open, the miracle happening, to help on great justice.

It was, indeed, to wonder. While, this new week, the story of the testimony takes the pale, stoop shouldered man into the presence of the murdered policeman, out of the mouth of the witness for the prosecution, passed words showing that Loud bore himself with dignity in those dread hours, when no counsel was present to help him; no little wife to smile on him, through his ordeal.

For, as Attorney Feeney drew from Chief Pollard, Loud, that morning at three o'clock, looked upon the face of the dead man, and said, very simply, "Poor fellow, I am sorry for him."

LOUD ALL ATTENTION.

So, very well indeed, might innocence have spoken. So, equally well indeed, might astute guilt have expressed itself, when nobody, in all the world, save the man himself and one other, knew the right of all that had happened, that night by the empty roadside. But, going on, Loud, as the recital dwelt on the incidents of those morning questionings, those questionings, after, apparently, all was over, gave his almost pained attention.

While, in the minds of those who parallel history with the present, rose other pictures. And, in that moment, Clarence Loud, who that night, according to testimony, was dazed, bloodstained, wounded and very weary, was compared to other men, also accused, long days ago. And, in the pale defendant, there surely was a distinct brother, in the days when they harnessed up the suspected to wild horses, as in France. If the accused were innocent—all right. The gods would free him from disinterment in days of guilty—then let him suffer, or tell all.

DRAMA SPEEDING.

Drama speeding; evidence drawing close; several States's witnesses almost corroborating the story of the alleged assault and robbery, when the accused was dragged from his fateful night, as he made his way to his home, avoiding nobody, lighter upholders, as usual, and always, every lots of evidence strained for by Mrs. Loud, who never misses a point in that is the Loud trial to date. With today the fireworks, due when Officer "Si" Smith, the satire, the subtlety of the careful, will probably come in for fearful hearing seventy-five persons at the hands of John Feeney.

Which, for little reason, perhaps, suggests the conversation of two well dressed women spectators. For today was indeed a day, when the millinery blossomed out in place of the bald male heads of a few days ago. And, as one lady said to another, at 5 o'clock in the morning:

"Why, my dear, we're here awfully early this morning."

"Gracious me, don't we have to, to get a seat?"

And—oh yes—please note, Chief Pollock of Wakefield stepped into Si Smith's office at noon, for a very good reason and that reason is, "to eat a couple of sandwiches."

SUGGESTION OF CITY PRINTING HEAD SCORED AT HEARING

Several Criticize Lawler, While Lomasney Commends Legislative Bill

Charges that the Boston city printing plant is dominated by private printing interests, that it has been used in an attempt to destroy organized labor and that the bill to place Superintendent Charles S. Lawler under civil service and thus retain him in office is a blow at Mayor-elect Curley were made at the hearing on the bill before the legislative Committee on Metropolitan Affairs today.

Former City Councillor Daniel J. McDonald, representing the printing tradesmen, declared that Mr. Curley said nightly on the stump that his first act as Mayor will be to "fire" Lawler.

"To the victor belongs the spoils," said McDonald, "and if Lawler is big enough to be superintendent he ought to be big enough to quit. As a matter of fact, he is an incompetent printer, and spends most of his time at his own engraving plant in Washington street."

Representative John W. McCormack insisted that "to the victor belongs the spoils," and he charged that the early meeting called by the committee opened it to the suspicion that it was attempting to continue Lawler in his job over the promise of Mr. Curley to "fire" him.

Representative Martin M. Lomasney, who is a member of the committee, declared that the section of the bill proposing to place the office under civil service ought to commend itself to Mr. Curley and his supporters.

"It gives the war veterans a fine chance of appointment," he said. "Let us help the real veterans, those who fought for their country overseas and not at home, those who did not pull wires to stay on this side of the Atlantic. I want Curley to have a chance to give some of these fine jobs to war veterans," he shouted.

More than 200 people attended the hearing, the first legislative hearing of the year on Beacon Hill. Mr. Curley did not attend, but many of his followers were present. Mr. Curley will be heard at a continued meeting Friday morning.

George H. Ellis, secretary of the Boston Typothetae, the master printers, said that Mr. Lawler was a competent superintendent and ought to be retained.

Sylvester J. McBride, speaking for the union printers, said that the scheme of the master printers to retain Lawler is to pay him "an industrial debt." McBride said the printers do not want the plant for work were encouraged to drop out of the union and to report to Ellis' printery for work. "It is a vicious bill."

Black and Tans in Erin Will Start Embarkation Tomorrow

ed during the full month which must elapse before final ratification of the treaty by the Irish Free State was possible.

On February 14 the Dail will reconvene to ratify formally the document which it approved as the representative body of the Irish republic.

The difficulties with which the new government is faced are commented upon by the political correspondent of the Freeman's Journal.

"A united and stable government has been established and the first stage of the fight for the treaty is won," he writes. "But the obstructionist tactics of the opposition have added immensely to the difficulties of the nation builders."

The Irish Independent editorially emphasizes the heavy task before the new government and hopes the people will loyally respect and obey it.

The Irish Times also is confident that the people will accept the Free State and "relegate to private life those anti-Treaty deputies in the Dail," but, it says, until then there will be no stable government, and "the most terrible injury efforts may be made to defeat the settlement and drive the provisional government, either to resignation or despair. Such efforts cannot be prevented, but their opportunities can be curtailed by early establishment of the Free State."

Bomb in Belfast; 2 Dead in Gunfire

Belfast, Jan. 11 (By the Associated Press).—A bomb was thrown at a train bearing seventy-five persons to their work in the Crumlin road district today.

The quick action of the driver, who put on full speed when he heard a revolver shot, resulted in the missile going wide of the mark.

The explosion splintered the car.

A man and his wife living nearby, who went to the door of their house to learn the cause of the commotion, were shot dead by a volley of rifle fire which swept the street.

FEDERAL DRUG PROBE NOW UNDER WAY IN NURSE LOGUE'S DEATH

SEEK FACTS ON 'DOPE' PARTIES

Did "dope" parties lead to the death of Miss Grace M. Logue?

Federal narcotic agents have begun investigating the mysterious death of the beautiful young nurse at the office of her sweetheart, Dr. Michael M. Stevens, in Woburn, on Christmas morning.

Dr. Erwin C. Ruth, chief of the Federal narcotic department here, has ordered "a searching investigation" to determine whether this girl was the victim of "dope parties," at which morphine and cocaine were freely used. Sensational developments are expected shortly.

HELD WILD ORGIES.

An agent of the local narcotic office has questioned a number of women and men in Woburn as to the wild orgies where young girls of Woburn, Boston and other cities have fallen prey to the wiles of the "dope" peddler.

It has been learned that during the past year there has grown up a circle of drug addicts and liquor users among the elite of Boston and environs, and the government authorities have begun to trace the source of the morphine and cocaine, which furnished the "life" of these "parties."

The Woburn medical examiner, Dr. Vernon C. Stewart, has pronounced death of the twenty-three-year-old nurse, due to "an overdose of morphine, taken while under the influence of medicinal doses given by a physician."

DR. STEVENS' STORY.

Dr. Stevens, by whom the victim was employed and with whom she lived on Pleasant street, Woburn, has given the story that he gave her a dose of morphine on the night before Christmas to relieve the pain of a toothache, and that probably while dazed by the drug, she arose from bed and took some more morphine from his medicine chest, not realizing what she was doing.

He has been arrested on a charge of attack and allowed his freedom on his personal recognizance.

But Mr. and Mrs. Harpee Logue of West Everett, parents of the dead girl, and Miss Anna Logue, her sister, scout the theory of suicide or accidental poisoning and declare that foul play has been committed.

They expressed the fear that Grace was a drug addict; that she had been enticed to many "dope" parties that were held at apartment houses and in the offices of prominent, business and professional men.

They are quite positive that Grace did not have a toothache; they had often begged Grace to leave the doctor and come home to live.

New York, Jan. 11.—The lockout and strike of 1,500 photo-engravers virtually had been ended today by the employers agreeing to take the men back at the old wage scale.

The union leaders have agreed to submit at a mass meeting of the membership of the Photo-Engravers' Union No. 1 the proposal of the employers that the union accept a minimum wage of $45 a week instead of the present $50. The employers will abide by the decision of this meeting.

Eleven engraving concerns have already signed the old union agreement.

Austria Pawns Famous Gobelin Tapestry for Big Loan in U. S.

Vienna, Jan. 10 (By the Associated Press).—The famous Gobelin tapestry collection will be sent to America immediately as a pledge for a loan of ($3,000,000 (normally about $15,000,000) to the Austrian government. It was officially announced today.

Replying to a protest presented by representatives of Austrian art societies, Minister of Finance Alfred Guertler was quoted by the Weiner Mittag as saying that if further agitation should defeat otherwise impossible credits then the rage of a needy populace would be turned against art institutes. In this case, he declared, more artistry would be destroyed than the whole value of the Gobelin collection.

HEIRESS ELOPES WITH YOUTHFUL SOCIETY MAN

Adaline Corey, Daughter of Philadelphia Steel Magnate, Runs Away With Henderson

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 11.—The marriage following an elopement of Miss Adaline Corey, debutante daughter of Alfred A. Corey, Jr., million aire steel magnate, to Norris E. Henderson, Jr., well known among the younger society set, has been announced by Mr. and Mrs. Corey.

The couple departed from the city secretly and the ceremony was performed at Elkton, Md., last Thursday. The first intimation of the romance to the parents and friends of the couple came in a telegram sent to Mr. and Mrs. Corey after the ceremony.

They are thought to have gone to Washington and are now on their honeymoon in Florida. Their plans for the future are not known to any of their friends.

The elopement did not create much surprise among their friends as they had been almost inseparable at various parties during the season and announcement of the engagement was confidently expected.

Miss Corey is twenty years old and her husband is twenty-four. Until a few months ago when the latter gave up her duties she was employed in school outside of Philadelphia and since has been taking part in social affairs.

DECLARES KILEY IS AGENT OF LOMASNEY

Farley, Protesting Street Extension at City Hall, Revives Political Fight

The old political fight in the West End, long since believed to have been buried, was today brought back to life during a hearing in the Street Commissioner's office at City Hall.

John H. Farley, who for some time was a political factor in opposing Martin M. Lomasney, charged that Daniel J. Kiley, a lawyer, and William F. Low, who is said to be a holder of much real estate, of being agents of Lomasney for the approving of a deal in which they were alone to profit.

The hearing was held on the proposition to extend Cutting street, near the North Station, West End, by cutting through two old tenement blocks now bounded by Lowell and Nashua streets. The estimated cost is about $75,000 to the city. The idea is to relieve traffic congestion there.

"This so-called improvement is such a picayune affair, it isn't worth putting through," declared Farley. "Most of the tenements are now idle. Poor people live in them, because they are not kept in any kind of condition.

"These men are here to favor the idea not because of any good it will do the district, but because the city would be forced to buy their properties at good figures and also property on which Lomasney holds mortgages."

Denials were entered by both Low and Kiley. Kiley, however, admitted that he invested the first $5,000 he earned in the property at No. 6 Nashua street, which he still owns.

Kiley said he and Farley were born and lived in that section for years, and that they both had moved away since. Farley became greatly heated at this statement and protested, claiming that he still lives with his mother at No. 5 Wall street, West End.

According to Kiley the proposed "improvement" would not help his property in Nashua street a great deal except that to keep its adessed value from depreciating.

Low said that if the proposition goes through he will build a $50,000 industrial structure on some property now covered by tenements.

Real estate holding shown by a blue print gives the names of Rebecca R. Leffler, Joseph P. Thatcher, Mary DeW. Thatcher, Margaret W. Thatcher, John J. Connor, Mary Haines, Louis H. Severens, and Mitchell Kevitsky. The property would have to be seized by eminent domain. They or their representatives were present, all were in favor of the plan. Farley was the only one who protested. The commission will hand down a decision later.

ADMITS COST DOES NOT FIX EDISON RATE

Company Witness Says It Is Regulated by Consumer's Possible "Competition"

Superintendent of Sales Louis R. Wallis today admitted to the State Department of Public Utilities that the rates charged for power electricity by the Edison Electric Illuminating Company were not based on the cost of getting the "juice" to the consumer, but on an estimate of what it would cost the consumer to start up a plant of his own and supply electricity strictly to himself.

Wallis made the admission during the course of a three-hour grilling by Attorney Grenville S. MacFarland of the Boston Academy of Music, at a hearing on the joint petition of the American and the city of Boston to force down the prices for the benefit of all classes of consumers in Greater Boston.

WITNESS "IN THE DARK."

Wallis testified that the publicly owned plant in Cleveland sells electricity for three cents per kilowatt hour and the private company there sells for eight cents and one-half cents, while the people here pay the Edison eleven cents.

Wallis said there was no gas plant in Cleveland and about all the people there used electricity.

He was put on the stand by the Edison after Phineas Sprague, the Edison engineer had displayed, under Mr. MacFarland's examination, what Corporation Counsel Arthur D. Hill described as an entire lack of knowledge of why the plants of all the other great cities of the country charge their customers lower rates than the Edison.

Although Wallis was put on as "the company's expert," he refused to answer three technical questions put to him by Mr. MacFarland on the rate situation. Mr. MacFarland accused Attorney F. Manley Ives, counsel of the Edison, of "putting a muzzle" on the witness.

"The lid is off, Manley if you can, Mr. Wallis," said Mr. Ives.

"I can't answer them," said the expert.

Mr. MacFarland asked the expert what kind he was making the Edison rates here in Boston.

COLLECTOR OF DATA.

He said he collected data about other companies that was turned over to W. W. Atkins, the general superintendent. He said he didn't know what became of it after that.

"How did you fix the maximum rate?" said Mr. MacFarland.

"I don't know," said Mr. Wallis.

"How is it fixed?"

"I don't know."

Corporation Counsel Hill asserted that the rates were the most intricate he has ever seen and that he would like to know just what basis was used to fix them.

Garland's Wife and Baby Live in Luxury While He Dwells in an Humble Shack

MRS. CHARLES A. GARLAND

CHARLES A. GARLAND

A STUDY IN CONTRASTS

Top, the Wren mansion in Dedham, where Mrs. Garland lives with her baby. Below it, Charles A. Garland's humble shack at North Carver.

Man Who Accepted Million for His Family Toils in Poverty

While Charles A. Garland, North Carver philosopher and idealist, is content to dwell in an humble shack and wrest his living from the soil, his pretty young wife and his baby daughter, for whom he has accepted a million dollar legacy, of which he will keep but $500, are living in luxury at Dedham.

Surrounded by everything that a woman could wish for, a palatial home, servants to answer every command, a doting father and mother, luxurious automobiles, beautiful clothes, jewels, the finest of food skillfully prepared for her—thus dwells the wife of the eccentric man who refuses to be a millionaire.

THEY HAVE EVERYTHING.

She and her baby have everything that young Garland has announced. Instead of paddling about in the mud and dirt of the barnyard of the North Carver farm the little baby daughter of the Garlands now plays about in the beautiful sun parlor of the Wren home, cooing happily as she is kissed by the warm rays of the kindly sun that pour through the huge glass windows.

A strange contrast this.

Ten miles from the nearest railroad, five miles from a telephone, in a little old three-room farmhouse—thus lives young Garland.

The question in the minds of friends of both Mr. and Mrs. Garland today is whether or not the pair will become reconciled now that young Garland has accepted the fortune which he spurned more than a year ago.

Whether or not Mrs. Garland will accept the slightly more than $300,000 which her Tolstoy-like husband says he will give her as her share. Whether or not she will ask for more.

WREN SHIELDS DAUGHTER.

But shielded by her father, Philip W. Wren, Boston broker, Mrs. Garland is refusing to discuss the many angles of the most peculiar case. Furthermore, she will not discuss it for her father has his way.

"I am disgusted with all of this publicity and with all of this foolishness," he stated to a Boston American reporter.

"While my daughter is here with me I do not think that there will be any discussion. I hate publicity and I hate all this nonsense. I wish it were all over. I do not know what my daughter will do or whether she will accept the money or not. I have nothing further to say. I am simply disgusted."

Thus the father sums up his ideas on the subject. That he is displeased with the events in his daughter's life is evident by the frowns that stand forth like thunder clouds when the name of Garland is mentioned.

GARLAND IS CONTENT.

As for Mrs. Garland—she left the beautiful home at Dedham during the day in order to visit her sister-in-law at the Massachusetts General Hospital and to keep out of sight and talking distance of reporters. Her baby daughter, however, remained at the Dedham home, blissfully unconscious of the great part she has played in influencing her father to accept a million dollars.

Meanwhile, young Garland is content to abide on the soil, cook his own meals, live in a tumbled down home and be separated from his young wife and baby—all for the sake of an ideal. He says he is happy. Apparently his young wife is also happy in her surroundings of an opposite nature. What will the outcome be?

TRANSPORT WITH 900 SOLDIERS ABOARD ALEAK

Homeward Bound From Antwerp the Ship Meets With Mishap

The army transport Crook, homeward bound from Antwerp with 900 soldiers from the American Army of Occupation on the Rhine, the bodies of many American soldier dead and 158 officers and crew 8s in difficulties, 300 miles east of Boston.

With smashing gales reported off the coast, apprehension regarding the Crook will prevail until she arrives, according to Captain William Basch, assistant marine superintendent for the port of New York of the Army Transport Service. She is due Friday.

Formerly the Roumanian of the Allen line, she was built thirty years ago, of 5,000 tons burden. She once plied between San Francisco and the Philippines. During the Spanish war she carried troops to Hawaii.

The first word from the transport was a radiogram received at the Charlestown Navy Yard today. The division commander of the Coast Guard at the Custom House was notified and at once prepared to send out the cutter Tampa from Boston and the Gresham from Eastport. The Army Transport Service at Brooklyn, N. Y., sent out the transport St. Mihiel to the assistance of the Crook, which is bound for New York.

Later advices from the ship stated that, while she had been leaking badly, her engineer crew had patched up the leaks with cement and that she was proceeding to her destination at speed of nine knots.

When this news was received the order to the Coast Guard cutters was withdrawn. Then word began arriving along the coast today and will be ordered out by wireless if the Crook again reports herself in danger.

The commander of the Crook reported to Washington, via the Chatham station, that she was "proceeding unaccompanied, but with ships in close proximity." The War Department issued a statement saying that those on board the Crook were in no danger.

DEMONSTRATION BY IDLE ALARMS VIENNA

Vienna, Jan. 11 (By the Associated Press).—The doors of all hotels in the city were closed and the principal shops were shuttered this afternoon as a result of unemployment demonstrations. The afternoon, however, passed without serious trouble or disorder.

Workmen of sixteen large factories adopted resolutions demanding the release of persons convicted in connection with the last unemployment demonstrations on December 1.

DEGREE ACCEPTS RESIGNATIONS IN SCIENCE SUIT

Hearing on Removal of Harvey and Eustace by Directors Is Put Off

The expected hearing before Justice Crosby of the Supreme Court on the question as to whether the directors of the Christian Science Church in removing the two remaining trustees of the Christian Science Publishing Society, Herbert W. Eustace and Paul Harvey, acted in good faith, failed to occur today.

After Justice Crosby came upon the bench, Judge Clifford F. Smith, associate counsel for the directors and member of the committee on publications, asked the court to appoint three new trustees of the publishing society.

Justice Crosby stated that he had decided to enter an interlocutory decree accepting the resignations of Eustace and Harvey. The question of appointing new trustees would be considered after the pleadings had been completed, but the time was not ready for that.

Whether the directors acted in good faith was not now before the court. The judge suggested that pleadings be completed at once so that a speedy hearing might be had.

Ex-Governor John L. Bates, on behalf of the directors, said he desired to call the attention of the court to the question whether as a matter of law it could accept the resignations of the trustees after they had been removed by the directors.

If the directors had power to remove the trustees, he argued, it would seem that the resignations of the trustees could not be accepted by the court unless it appeared in the decree that the resignations were accepted at a time prior to their removal.

On the question of filing an answer to that part of the petition of the trustees that their accounts be approved, Mr. Bates said that the directors would do the best they could under the circumstances.

It was difficult to get information so long as the directors were kept outside of the building of the Christian Science Publishing Society.

Only yesterday the directors learned that the accountants now engaged in examining the accounts of the trustees had expended $12,000 for hotel expenses. How many other things the auditors might show could not be told until the directors had a chance to inspect them.

It finally was agreed that a hearing should begin tomorrow on the allowance of the accounts of the trustees, and the question of appointing new trustees is first to be considered.

SIX INDICTED IN RAID ON THE GOLDEN WEST

Captain of Schooner and Others Held for Cargo of Alcohol

Federal indictments in connection with unlawfully importing about 2,200 cases of alcohol, valued at $1,000,000, on the schooner Golden West, today were returned to Judge James M. Morton, Jr., of the Federal Court.

Those indicted were Captain Donnie Amero of Saugus, of the schooner, Filippo Bruno, formerly engaged in the liquor business in this city; Tony and Frank Carbone, brothers, of Plymouth, and Giuseppe and Genarro Balsamo, brothers, of Boston.

It is charged that the defendants between December 21 and 23 unlawfully imported and fraudulently assisted in importing liquor into the United States, at or near Boston and Plymouth, from the island of Miquelon, near Nova Scotia.

A conspiracy charge against the defendants is that Bruno last November engaged Captain Amero to be master of the Golden West and that Frank Carbone and the Balsamos induced from the schooner Golden West the alcohol.

An Italian named "Jim," according to the indictment, on December 23 went ashore in one of the schooner's dories and on the following day embarked in a schooner called the Star for the Golden West. In furtherence of the conspiracy, Tony Carbone, it is alleged, went out in a boat to the Golden West, these trips resulting in the defendants taking the alcohol off the ship in small boats.

Today the Carbone brothers appeared before Judge Morton, pleaded not guilty and furnished bail of $5,000 each. Bruno appeared before Judge Morton later and pleaded not guilty. He was held in $10,000 bail for trial, which he furnished.

FIRST BREATH OF FURIOUS GALE HITS BOSTON

Heavy Rain and Snow on Wings of 65-Mile Wind Headed This Way

The first breath of a furious northeast snow storm which is raging today from Cape Cod to Tennessee struck Boston about 11 o'clock this forenoon, and increased in intensity from that time.

"Whole gale" warnings have been ordered up from Boston to Eastport, a whole gale in meteorological terminology being a wind storm of approximately sixty-five miles an hour velocity.

Forecaster Smith of the Boston Weather Bureau station said today that following the storm is a cold wave which will send the mercury down to about 15 above on Thursday and still lower on Friday.

Snow is falling from New York city to the Great Lakes and rain from Atlantic City to Tennessee. The precipitation ranges from an inch to an inch and three-quarters, where it is raining, and from ten to fourteen inches of snow in the northerly section covered by the storm.

The storm was central over Virginia at 8 a. m. today and is moving rapidly northeastward.

Coastwise vessels which were to have sailed today were held in port and several Boston-bound vessel were held in Maine ports.

Fleets of barges in tow of ocean tugs are scurrying into Vineyard Haven, Provincetown and other shelter ports. Several tows are being held at the Cape Cod Canal until the storm blows over.

The official forecast is:

Rain or snow this afternoon and tonight; Thursday fair and colder; strong to high east winds, shifting to northwest.

MAYOR PETERS PICKS 2 AS WOMAN REGISTRARS

With the naming of Miss Gertrude E. Maloney of Brighton and Miss Gertrude Goldstein of Roxbury, the last two positions as assistant women registrars, have been filled in the Boston election department. Both have served on the staff throughout his term of office. There are many rumors as to future activities of other stenographers of the Peters administration. Miss Ruth Walton of the Mayor's stenographic staff will not look for further city work, it is said, but will enter private employment.

New Haven, Ct., Jan. 11.—Minnie Roth, whom the police say is known as Minnie Katz and Minnie Weinstein, with Louis Roth and Jacob Miller, all of New York, arrested here Saturday, left for Springfield, Mass., with officers today to stand trial on charges of conspiracy. They had waived requisition papers.

The police received word that Worcester as well as Boston and Providence, R. I., wanted these three, and also a woman arrested in New York, who gave the name of Ida Hoffman.

LITVINOFF TO HEAD SOVIETS AT GENOA

Moscow, Jan. 10 (By the Associated Press).—Maxim Litvinoff, chief of the Russian Soviet legations abroad; Leonid Krassin, Soviet commercial representative, and M. Kakowsky, President of the Ukraine Republic, are most generally thought likely to be likely to represent Soviet Russia at the Genoa economic conference in March. It is generally considered unlikely that Premier Lenine will go.

PISCOPO ALLEGED EXTORTION PLOT HEARD IN PELLETIER CASE

fee or the major portion of it.

3—That, when he protested he did not have the money, Pelletier told him to sell the hotel or turn it over to "us."

4—That these sinister warnings of Pelletier's inability of "getting into trouble" with his hotel had much to do with his payment of the $21,000 in fees.

Piscopo testified that he had to sell property to make the payment. He made it in 1920, then sold the Colonial Hotel and went to Laconia.

STRICKEN OUT.

Attorney Louis C. Boyle of Kansas City and Washington was in charge of Pelletier's defence today. Senator James A. Reed went to Washington to vote in the Senate Newberry case.

Boyle made a spirited attempt early in the day to have all the evidence given yesterday regarding Charles H. Innes and William J. Corcoran in the George T. Perry case stricken from the records. He further moved that all hearsay evidence in that case, as affecting Pelletier, be stricken out.

The motion was denied temporarily. He will have the time to renew it later.

Robert P. Matches, star State witness in the Emerson Motors case, was in court today ready for examination. But as Senator Reed was away he was excused until tomorrow. State counsel opposed this postponement.

The George T. Perry et al. case was finished today. In this case Allen charged Pelletier with using his assistants to nol pros cases against alleged members of the so-called "auto theft ring" of Greater Boston in 1918.

Attorney-General Allen then announced he would take up the Thomas Nee case. This is a case in which Thomas Nee, Michael A. Conley, John P. Geary and Martin F. Lee were charged with attempting to break and enter in the night time, on or about December 31, 1920. Pelletier is charged with having nol prossed or permitted Assistant District Attorneys to nol pros, from improper motives, cases which should have been prosecuted.

The Commonwealth then took up the case of Benjamin Piscopo. In this case Pelletier is charged with having permitted his office to be used for the purpose of coercion to release or settle several claims or to give up money or property, and with having aided or abetted persons in extorting money and property by means of threats of criminal prosecution.

Attorney Marshall read the deposition of Benjamin Piscopo, taken in Laconia, N. H., on December 23, 1921. In the presence of Eb E. Thompson, clerk of the Superior Court at Laconia, Attorney Marshall and Attorney Daniel J. Gallagher.

The deposition read as follows:

Q.—Where do you live? A.—Laconia, N. H., since 1911. Before that in Boston.

Q.—Do you own property in Boston? A.—Yes.

Q.—Are you married? A.—Yes. My previous wife was divorced in 1917.

Q.—Did you have domestic difficulties with your previous wife? A.—Yes.

LOST FIRST SUIT.

Q.—Do you remember the date of the decree of divorce? A.—I think it was around Nov. 24, 1917.

Q.—How long was it pending? A.—Four or five years. There were two divorce cases.

Q.—How was the first one decided? A.—It was decided against me.

Q.—Do you recall when the second divorce suit was filed? A.—No.

Q.—The papers for the second divorce were filed in October, 1917? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who was your counsel in the first divorce case? A.—Attorney Truett of Laconia and Melvin O. Adams of Boston.

Q.—Was Colonel Jewett your chief counsel in both cases.

Q.—There was some settlement of alimony in the second case, was there not? A.—Yes.

Q.—When were the final terms agreed to? A.—Shortly before December, 1917.

Q.—How much alimony did you settle? A.—If that is going to be put into the papers I do not want to tell. I don't want it printed in the papers.

PAID $400,000.

Clerk Campbell—It will not be given to any papers from me.

Witness—What will happen when it comes out in the trial in Boston?

Attorney Marshall—We cannot control that. You will have to answer in this condition.

A—I turned $200,000 over to her and $200,000 to her children, to remain in trust at the Old Colony Trust Company.

Q.—Was the second divorce case tried in New Hampshire? A.—It was not tried at all.

Q.—Was Mclsaac the attorney in the first divorce case? A.—No.

Q.—Did you see him later? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you mean Daniel V. Mc. Isaac? A.—Yes, he was associated with Murrill on School street.

Q.—When did you first meet him in connection with the second divorce case? A.—I had trouble with a man to follow who sued me for $2,000. Mc. Isaac was counsel for me in that case.

Q.—When did you see him in connection with the divorce case. A.—I don't remember. I think it was in the Spring of 1917.

OFFERED TO HELP.

Q.—What was your conversation with Mclsaac about the divorce case? A.—He asked me how I was getting along with my divorce case and said I would have to try it again. Mclsaac said, "Let me help," and I said, "Go ahead."

Q.—Was Colonel Jewett your chief counsel? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was Melvin O. Adams still your counsel? A.—He was then.

Q.—Did you see Mclsaac again? A.—Yes. I saw him several times after that. I can't say how many.

Q.—How long did you talk to him each time? A.—I don't remember. Anywhere from ten to twenty minutes.

Q.—How often did you come to Boston? A.—Sometimes every week.

Q.—Did Mclsaac consult you about your divorce? A.—Yes. He thought he could help me and I could help him. Colonel Jewett was my council in New Hampshire and Mr. Morris and Melvin O. Adams got out of the case in Boston, so I hired Mclsaac, whom I had known for years.

SOLD PROPERTY.

Q.—Did Mclsaac have anything to do with the drawing up of papers for you? A.—Yes, he arranged the mortgage when I sold property and gave $200,000 to my children. I sold two pieces of property.

Q.—Was this done in Mclsaac's or Whipple's office? A.—Mclsaac attended to that in the Probate Court. He hired someone to look up the title.

Q.—Were there any other papers that Mclsaac drew up for you? A.—No.

Q.—Did you consult Pelletier about your divorce case? A.—No.

Q.—Did Pelletier ever act as your attorney? A.—No.

Q.—Did he ever draw papers for you? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever have a conference with Mclsaac and Pelletier when you settled concerning his services? A.—Yes. After the case was settled I said to him: "You have, I have given everything to my wife and you must wait for your bill." After six or seven weeks I went to his office again. I said: "How much is your bill? I am going to sell property and am going to settle." Mclsaac said: "I'm going to have a talk with Joe next week."

Q.—Who did he mean by Joe? A.—Pelletier.

SIGN HOTEL OVER.

"Then he said, 'I will want $25,000 for your job.' I sort of laughed and said, 'You don't mean that.' He said, 'Yes I do,' and I said 'I can't pay it.' Then I went to New Hampshire. I was worried about that bill. I got 25,000 and went to his office again. I kissed him again over that bill. He said again, $25,000. I said 'I have a check with me for $5,000.' Colonel Jewett has been my counsel for five years and he has come to the Parker House in Boston with witnesses. But he did not charge me anything like that.' Then Mclsaac said, 'I'll see what I can do for you. You go back to New Hampshire and I will see Joe and Webber. If I was alone it would be different. But I have two others beside me.' I said, 'I don't know them.' The next time I came I found Pelletier with Mclsaac. I said the bill worried me. I asked Mclsaac how much he would charge. Pelletier spoke up and said, 'You think $25,000 too much. You have a hotel, haven't you?' You can sign the property over in our name. I didn't like that. It made me mad. I said, 'You fix that bill' to Mclsaac. I said to Pelletier, 'I'll not pay that bill.' Mclsaac said, 'I told you not with your 12 o'clock license.' I said Melvin O. Adams had gotten the license for me. I paid him $400 for doing it."

REFUSED TO PAY.

Q.—Was it Mclsaac who said he had helped you with the license? A.—Yes. Pelletier said, "You'd better pay it." I told him I would not pay $25,000. He said, "You would get in a lot of trouble."

Q.—Who said that? Pelletier? A.—They were both talking, but Mclsaac said that. He said, "Joe here can watch your hotel." The next time I didn't care. I wished they would close it up. I would have less worry.

Then Pelletier said, "Didn't Mr. Mclsaac help you out with your 12 o'clock license?" I said no.

Q.—Did you employ Pelletier when you tried to get that license? A.—No.

Q.—Who was doing the talking at that conference? A.—Both of them. I was mad and lost my brain.

Q.—Did Pelletier say he would make trouble for your hotel? A.—They were both talking.

"I was worried all night." the deposition went on. "The hotel had cost me a half million dollars. I telephoned to Mr. Ratshesky of the United States Trust Company I sold property and passed the papers and took $14,000 to Mclsaac."

Q.—Was this drawn on your own check? A.—Yes, I asked Mclsaac if that would do. He said, "If I were all alone I would do it in a minute, but I have two others with me. I said, "I'll tell you what I will do. I will give you $14,000 and a six months' note for $2,000." He said, "I'd do that, but I am going to lose money from my own pocket because the other fellows won't do it."

$21,000 TOTAL.

At this point the check for $14,000 was offered. It was dated May 20, 1918, and was drawn on the Old Colony Trust Company and endorsed by Daniel V. Mclsaac. The promissory note for $2,000 was also offered. This was dated November 29, 1918.

Q.—The check for $14,000 made $16,000 paid by you to Mclsaac? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you had already given him check for $5,000? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did that make a total of $21,000 you paid Mclsaac? A.—Yes.

The deposition showed that Piscopo opposed the carrying of the original papers to Boston to be introduced at the trial. He said "my papers must stay with me in New Hampshire. I will not let them go to Boston and have all my private business published in the newspapers. You can have copies, but you cannot have the originals."

Pelletier Jewett assured Piscopo that the local newspapers of New Hampshire would not be given the papers, but that counsel had no control over the publicity at the Pelletier trial.

Piscopo was then asked in detail about the two checks and the note aggregating $21,000. In explaining the $5,000 check he said his land property and asked for a loan of $5,000 and Ratshesky gave him his personal check.

TORE NAME OFF.

The $14,000 was dated May 20, 1918, and the $2,000 note dated May 29, 1918. Piscopo identified his signature on the two checks and notes. All bore the signature of Daniel Mclsaac.

Q.—Did you later pay the $2,000 note to Mclsaac? A.—Yes. I paid him a check for $2,000 on November 25, 1918.

Q.—Did you tear your signature from the $2,000 note? A.—Yes, I always do that when a note is paid.

Q.—Where is the original $5,000 check? A.—I think I got it among my papers in Boston. My bookkeeper, Mr. Ostermeyer, has it.

Q.—Give Pelletier's exact words at that conference. A.—Well, there was talk by both. I did not know Pelletier. I talked to Mclsaac. I talked about paying the bill. I told Mc. Isaac I thought it was too much and then Pelletier asked if I thought Mclsaac hadn't helped me to get my 12 o'clock license. I said I was not a Rockefeller to pay such an amount. Mclsaac got up and said, "You'd better pay it, Ben. You know Joe can put somebody down to watch your hotel." I told him I would be glad if they closed it up.

Q.—Was Pelletier angry? A.—He meant business. I said "I don't owe any bills in Boston. I have known Mclsaac for a long time." Pelletier said, "is it too much, $25,000?" I said, "Yes, it is. I can't pay it. It's a lot of money."

Q.—What did you do then? A.—I worried about the bill. I was afraid they would put young people in my hotel for drinks. I was afraid they would put up a job on me.

Q.—What do you mean by putting up a job? A.—I thought they would send people who were not twenty-one years old in for drinks and I would not know their ages and they would break my license. Then later I paid the money to Mclsaac.

Attorney Andrew Marshall, who read part of the deposition, asked the witness how long Colonel Jewett had served him as counsel. The witness answered from 1912 until 1918. This was excluded.

Mr. Marshall said he wished to show that Jewett had represented Piscopo for five years and charged only $4,000, and it was relative to compare such evidence with the months of service for which Mclsaac charged $21,000.

Q.—What was the name of your hotel? A.—It was the Trafalgar when I got it and I changed it to the Colonial.

Q.—Did Mr. Webber ever do any work for you? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever ask him to? A.—No.

Q.—Did Mclsaac ever do any other legal work for you? A.—Only this $16,000 suit brought by the firm I met in front of the theatre.

Q.—What did you pay Melvin O. Adams for getting your 12 o'clock license? A.—$400.

$5,000 ENOUGH.

Q.—Did you tell Mclsaac the $5,000 was more than enough? A.—Yes.

Q.—What is your business in Laconia? A.—I own a farm.

Attorney Gallagher cross-examined Mr. Benjamin Piscopo, in the taking of the deposition, which read as follows:

Q.—When you first spoke to Mclsaac, it was four or five years after the first divorce suit? A.—Yes.

Q.—Your wife filed a suit for separate maintenance? A.—Yes.

Q.—And Mclsaac had to defend you in that case? A.—I think so.

Q.—How many children have you? A.—Six. They range from 16 to 24.

Q.—Did your wife have counsel when you brought suit for divorce? A.—Yes, she had a dozen attorneys.

Q.—You asked for divorce on grounds of desertion? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Did Mclsaac tell you the Probate Court had decided against your wife in the separate maintenance suit? A.—I don't remember those things now.

Q.—She never got her maintenance? A.—No.

WANTED $360,000.

Q.—Then, in 1917, she had many attorneys? A.—Hill and Hill in Keyhole, William Flaherty and Attorney Santomusso.

Q.—Previous to your employing Mclsaac did you make an attempt to make an adjustment with your wife? A.—Yes. We had it all fixed up to be settled for $200,000. Then she came back to Boston and charged her off.

Q.—When was that? A.—1913.

Q.—Did you make further attempts to adjust matters before you employed Mclsaac? A.—Several times. She wanted $300,000. Jewett stopped me from settling. I am sorry now I didn't accept the $200,000 settlement.

Q.—When you paid Mclsaac $5,000, did you settle the final fee? A.—No.

Q.—Was it before or after the $5,000 that you talked with Pelletier? A.—Two or three weeks before, I guess.

Q.—Between February, 1918, when you paid the $5,000, and May 20, 1920, when you paid the remainder, did you see Mclsaac or Pelletier? A.—I didn't see Pelletier, but I saw Mclsaac.

Q.—Was there some talk with Mc. Isaac when you paid him the final amount? A.—He said he wanted $30,000. I said I couldn't pay $25,000, but I would bring $14,000. He said, "If I can't do alone I would do it for that." Then I said I would give him a note for $2,000. He said, "All right, but I am going to lose money for myself."

HAD NO MONEY.

Q.—When you paid the $5,000, did you say anything about the balance? A.—He stuck to the $25,000 figure.

Q.—When you paid the big sum, was it not partly for fees in other cases? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was it a substantial amount? A.—He sent no bill.

Q.—What were the other cases? A. Jay when he was a little case about a man who wanted some more money from me and there was another $200 Blackmail case.

Q.—What did Pelletier say about the $25,000? A.—Pelletier wanted to know why I didn't pay. I said I had a lot of property but no money.

Q.—Pelletier never said a word about your hotel? A.—He said, "You'd better pay $35,000 or we will make a lot of trouble for you with your hotel."

Q.—Did he say what the trouble with the hotel was? A.—Pelletier said he could make a lot of trouble for me. He said he would put a man to watch the hotel.

Q.—Was it Mclsaac or Pelletier who said they would put someone to watch? A.—Both.

Q.—You say it disturbed you? A.—Yes, Jos said, "We can investigate that hotel," and I got kind of mad.

Q.—To whom did you first tell this story? A.—No one.

Q.—You never told anyone? A.—I never tell my business to anyone. I told Jewett two months ago.

WAITED FOUR MONTHS.

Q.—So, although you were alarmed, you waited four months before you paid anything? A.—Yes. I didn't want to pay $25,000.

Q.—Did you make some talk about town that the district attorney was after you and you didn't need to fear anything? A.—He never was my counsel.

Q.—Did you ever offer Mclsaac a piece of land over in East Boston? A.—I had but I had never seen it and wanted to sell. He said he had a man who wanted to buy. Later he changed his mind.

Witness was taken for re-direct in terrogatories:

Q.—What counsel did you say your wife had? A.—She had Martin, Hurlburt and Innes. Later she had Whipple and Santomusso and Flaherty.

Re-cross-examination:

Q.—Did you tell Jewett that you were settling for $400,000? A.—Yes. He was mad at me and said I was crazy.

Q.—Were you perfectly satisfied then? A.—I was then, but I am not now.

Q.—Did you ever say you paid $15,000 to Adams for asking one question? A.—No. I had any arguments with Adams. He was a good friend to me.

The deposition ended.

ADMITS GETTING HALF.

Attorney Boyle agreed without further evidence that $5,000 and $2,000, Piscopo's notes representing notes and interest, were deposited to Mclsaac's account and that half of the $21,000 check was later deposited to Pelletier's account.

The first two deposits of Mclsaac were in the Federal Trust Company and all the others were in the Old Colony Trust.

The Piscopo case was abandoned and the case of Israel M. Stahlman and Allen M. Gedelman, charged with a statutory offence, on or about February, 1919, was taken up. Pelletier is charged with having failed, from improper motives, to prosecute, after having withheld important evidence.

Joseph H. Samuel, attorney, with offices in the Pemberton Building testified he was attorney for Stahlmary. He said he was present at an interview with Judge Sullivan of Charlestown, counsel for Mrs. Stahlmary, Mrs. Stahlmary herself and Mrs. Gedderman woman, and a young lawyer named Claffell, when a family quarrel was discussed, prior to any proceedings along statutory lines.

ARCHER, NOT INNES, LAW SCHOOL FOUNDER

Gleason L. Archer, dean of the Suffolk Law School, has called the attention of the Boston Americans to an error in today's early editions in which it was stated that Charles H. Innes, mentioned in the trial of District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier before the Supreme Court, was the founder of the Suffolk Law School. Mr. Archer himself was the founder of the school. Mr. Innes has never been connected with the school in any way.

An ambulance was called to take Mrs. Hawkes to the hospital, but she refused to go there. A doctor treated her home.

A Simple Way To Remove Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be left soft, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.—Advertisement.

NERVOUS AND HALF-SICK WOMEN

These Letters Recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will Interest You

For Your Own Good Please Read Them

Youngstown, Ohio—"Last fall I began to feel mean and my back hurt me and I could hardly do my little bit of housework. I was played out when I would justsweep one room and would have to rest. I would have to put a cushion behind me when I would sit down and at night I could not sleep unless I had something under my back. I had awful cramps every month and was just nearly all in. Finally my husband said to me one day, 'Why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine?' and I said, 'I am willing to take anything if I could get well again.' So I took one bottle and a second one and felt better and the neighbors asked me what I was doing and said, 'Surely it must be doing you good all right.' I have just finished my eighth bottle and I cannot express to you how I feel, the way I work to it. If you can use this letter you are welcome to it and if any woman does not believe what I have written to be true, she can write to me and I will describe my condition to her as I ...ve to you."—Mrs. ELMER HEASLEY, 141 S. Jackson St., Youngstown, Ohio.

"I was very nervous and run-down," writes Mrs. L. E. Wiese of 709 Louisa St., New Orleans, La. "I would often sit down and cry, and was always blue and had no ambition. I was this way for over a year and had allowed myself to get into quite a serious condition. One day I saw your advertisement in the daily paper and began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once. I have improved ever since taking the third bottle and I find it is the best medicine I have ever taken."

Benefited by First Bottle

"I was completely run down and not able to do my housework. I just dragged myself around and did not have energy to get up when once I sat down, for I was so nervous. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in our paper 'The Indiana Daily Times,' and learned all about it. I received results from the very first bottle and now I am doing all my own work, even washing and ironing, and I never felt better in my life. I tell all my friends it is due to you."—Mrs. ELIZABETH RENNICK, 403 N. Pine St., Indianapolis, Indiana.

You should pay heed to the experience of these women. They know how they felt before taking the Vegetable Compound, and afterwards, too. Their letters are true.

TELLS SECRET EXECUTION OF SOLDIER

Gallows Erected at Night at Gievres, Testifies Col. Symond

By the Associated Press.

Washington, Jan. 11.—Army officers were called in today by the Senate Committee investigating charges that American soldiers had been hanged in France to check up on testimony of certain witnesses as to the alleged illegal executions.

Dr. H. E. Ross of Danville, Ill., a battalion surgeon, 361st Infantry, declared he heard of no lynchings at Gondrecourt, and that he never heard of any hangings in that locality. Robert Harrison of Wilmington, North Carolina, testified that he saw a Mexican lynched near Gondrecourt and that the body was taken to a hospital with rope marks around the neck.

SAW PRIVATE SHOT.

Senator Watson presented an affidavit by J. E. McDonald of Youngstown, Ohio, that he was at the Bassens Prison in France when Private Fitzgerald was shot and killed "by a Sergeant Coope or Kuippa, of New Castle, Pa."

McDonald said he was ready to testify in support of recent testimony to that effect by Edward Dunnor of San Francisco.

Details of the execution of a soldier at Gievres on June 20, 1919, were given by Colonel Charles J. Symonds of Camp Sherman, Ohio, in command there at the time. The gallows, he said, was erected the night of May 19, the execution was secret and was not known generally until the next day. He said there was no other gallows there from February, 1918, to February, 1919.

Colonel Symonds was shown a picture of a gallows at Gievres as submitted by a former service man.

"It corresponds closely to the one at Gievres. I believe it is the one I ordered erected there," he said.

Questioned regarding testimony that two negroes were lynched near Gievres, Colonel Symonds said he could not conceive the anything of the kind happening without a report of it reaching him.

Senator Watson questioned Colonel Symonds concerning the "secrecy surrounding the execution at Gievres."

"Was the soldier hanged in a uniform?" Senator Watson asked.

"Yes. The body was taken down and buried in the regular way. The grave was in a separate part of the cemetery."

DISCOUNTS DORCHESTER MAN.

"Did the soldier make any statement prior to the hanging?"

On the gallows he asked that his family be notified, but that they be not told as to how he died. He also asked that they shoot, and not hang him, Colonel Symonds said.

Captain Joseph D. Hahn, now at Camp Benning, Georgia, who was stationed at Gievres from March 1918, to July 20, 1919, said he heard of no illegal executions at that point. During his service there he only knew of one legal hanging.

"A witness, Harry W. Segal of Dorchester, Mass., has testified that he saw you and others take two negro soldiers out and execute them, Captain Hahn was asked.

"Is that true?" he was asked.

"It's absolutely untrue," said Captain Hahn, adding that he could not recall Segal or any incident which might have caused him to make such a statement.

BERLIN, N. H., WITNESS.

The provost officer at Gievres, Oscar P. Cote of Berlin, N. H., who was stationed there from April 1918, to June, 1919, testified he never heard of the alleged lynching of the negro there.

Luther Churchill of East Bridgewater, Mass., testified he never heard of the hanging of a soldier in the Sixteenth infantry in December, 1917. As recording officer at the regimental hospital, Churchill said he was positive no body of a soldier with rope marks around the neck was sent there.

PULLS OVER ICE CHEST IN QUEST FOR PIE

Six-year-old Perrachi Cumi of No. 15 Cooper street is a hardy youngster. He wanted pie for breakfast today. So he went to the ice chest and tugged at the door. It stuck. He pulled harder and got results. The chest came over on top of him and poor little Perracchi is at the Haymarket Relief Hospital with a fractured right leg and an abiding distrust of pie as a breakfast food.

With this very constipating diet—yet no constipation

Under the supervision of a leading scientist a remarkable feeding experiment was made. For one whole month men and women were given eggs, milk, cheese—all constipating foods—and yet they did not suffer from constipation because they added Fleischmann's Yeast to their diet.

When they ate the same constipating diet without Fleischmann's Yeast as a corrective, all four were constipated.

Thousands of men and women all over the country have found that eating Fleischmann's Yeast daily gives them normal and regular elimination. Fresh yeast is rich in the elements which increase the action of the intestines and keep the body clean of poisons.

Add 2 to 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast to your own daily diet. You'll soon find that laxatives are unnecessary. Be sure it's Fleischmann's Yeast—the familiar tin-foil package with the yellow label. Place a standing order with your grocer.

Beauty Going to Reno to Secure Divorce From Gibbs

FIND STILLS IN GENERAL ALARM CHELSEA FIRE

Help Summoned From Revere and Everett to Fight $75,000 Fire

Two big stills and sixteen gallons of moonshine whiskey were found when a general alarm fire swept through four buildings in the "rag district" of Chelsea, this morning to wipe out many dwellings and causing $75,000 damage.

While the police officials record the cause of the fire as under examination they are of the opinion that the flames were started by the stills and an exhaustive investigation is now under way by Chelsea police and Federal authorities.

The fire started in a building at No. 85 Elm street. When the engines arrived the flames had burst through the building and spread to adjacent structures and were gaining rapidly, fanned by a stiff breeze. A second and then a general alarm were sounded and help was called from Revere and Everett.

Tenement dwellers in the district were aroused and hundreds of them hastily packed their belongings and prepared to flee as it became apparent that the flames might get beyond the control of the fire department.

Fighting from three sides the blaze was finally brought under control and confined to four buildings.

Then came the finding of the stills, one of forty-gallon and the other of sixty-gallon capacity, and the whiskey.

According to the police the building in which the fire started is owned by Samuel Levveret of No. 81 Elm street, Chelsea. Levveret, the police say, told them that he had rented the building in which the stills were found to a man named Eli Sobel. Sobel denied this to the police.

PRETTY 'PEGGY' GIBBS TO SEEK DIVORCE

Brockton War Bride Will Go to Reno to Rid Self of Husband

Brockton, Jan. 11.—Pretty "Peggy" Gibbs, the handsomest of Brockton's war brides, has announced her intension of journeying to Reno for the purpose of securing a divorce from her husband, Harold A. Gibbs of this city.

Balked by the stubborn contest of her husband several months when her suit alleging cruelty was met with a cross suit in Superior Court here, the pretty twenty-year-old English lass says she will endeavor to make it sure this time.

Gibbs, who has been served with a notice of the pending action, declared he would ignore the summons and not interfere in any way.

"I want out fairly and squarely in the Superior Court here," said Gibbs. "Besides, Reno divorces are a joke."

The marital tangle of the Gibbses created quite a sensation when it first came to the public's attention more than a year and a half ago. Mrs. Gibbs, charging that her life had been ruined by the repeated jealousy and abuse of her husband, had him before the District Court on a charge of assault and battery. He was found guilty and a substantial fine imposed, which he appealed.

Then the little bride brought a divorce suit, alleging cruel and abusive treatment. Considerable interest was injected into the case when Gibbs named Hayberd Bowles, a young Brockton leather dealer, as co-respondent.

The presiding justice refused the suit and dismissed it without prejudice. Later Gibbs sued Bowles for alienation of affection and the matter was adjusted out of court.

Mrs. Iva A. Gibbs met her husband as a girl of about seventeen in an English tavern while he was serving with the United States navy in England. After a brief courtship they were married and came to this country to live.

"Too much family," she characterized her life at the home of her husband's folks. Gibbs will refuse to enter further into the case and is content to allow her to pass out of his life if she chooses in this manner.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS AND NOTES

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

"SHOPPING" for pictures" is what Adolph Zukor calls the new pastime of the confirmed motion picture fans. Up to last Summer, according to the head of the Famous Players-Lasky forces, the public took pictures as they came. They patronized the neighborhood playhouse without knowing often what films were being shown there. Today they are more discriminating. They pick and choose.

The result of this discrimination is the rise of the "super special" picture. The all-star cast that includes a "star" author and "star" director is coming into popular favor. When it is a case of seeing such a film, or a more mediocre one at the same price, then one will, naturally enough, see the special one.

Legitimate theatres are being commandeered for these theatres to a certain extent, but many producers, Mr. Zukor is one, Carl Laemmle of Universal is another, Marshall Neilan and Allan Dwan are others, are showing their features on regular motion picture programs and at all motion picture houses. Thus it is that we hear that William DeMille's next film will have as co-stars Jack Holt and Agnes Ayres, that John Barrymore's film, "The Lotus Eaters," was directed by no less a master than Marshall Neilan, that Cecil DeMille's film has Gloria Swanson, Wallace Reid and Elliott Dexter as its shining lights, or that the Filmmaurice film version of "Peter Ibbetson" was filmed with Elsie Ferguson, Wallace Reid, George Fawcett, Elliott Dexter and Monsigne Love in the cast. If these are "super specials" films, who can blame the public for "shopping for pictures." It is the tendency as a whole that the successful producer must consider.

O'BRIEN BEHIND FOOTLIGHTS.

EUGENE O'BRIEN is deserting the Klieg lights for the stage, but for a week only. He has left for Detroit where he will appear at a local theatre twice a day in a monologue especially written for him. After the week's engagement he will return to Fort Lee to start another production for Selznick.

BARTHELMESS IN "SONNY."

"SONNY," the stage piece by George V. Hobart, has been chosen as the third story for Richard Barthelmess. He will start filming it under the direction of Henry King as soon as they finish the cutting editing of the second release for Inspiration Pictures, "All at Sea."

In "Sonny" Barthelmess will be seen as the ex-soldier who, at the request of his dying "buddy," impersonates the latter so as to cheer his old mother. Those who know the play as given on Broadway last season remember that it eventually transpires that the mother was conscious of the deception from the first.

CAMERA CLICKS.

MAE ALLISON, ex-Metro star, is completing plans for a trip to New York to talk over theatrical engagements with Broadway managers. Her contract with Metro expired some weeks ago. . . . Corinne Griffith returned last week from the Florida coast, where she has been making exterior scenes for "Island Wives," based on a South Sea story by Bob Dexter. . . . Leah Wyant, who was seen as Beauty in the original production of George Hobart's stage success, "Experience," will play the role of Fanny Blaine in the William DeMille feature, "Bought and Paid For." . . . William Duncan and his co-star, Edith Johnson, have begun work on "Man Hunters," a story of the Northwest. . . . Having completed "A Game Chicken" for Famous Players-Lasky, Bebe Daniels is taking her first vacation in a year and a half. . . . Vitagraph has bought the film rights to the Booth Tarkington novel of American life, "The Magnificent Ambersons." . . . Marie Prevost's next Universal feature will be "Don't Get Personal." . . . Robert Ellis, Mae Allison's husband, has been chosen to play opposite Priscilla Dean in "Wild Honey."

Something better or something for less

THERE are two ways of giving the public something more for its money. One is to put something extra into the goods; the other to sell the article for less money.

In the first case, it is always a safe assumption that the public benefits; in the latter there is always the danger of something being taken out to lower the price.

Filene value giving is well known for the way it names the lowest price yet possible on certain lines of goods.

But for every instance of this kind there are a dozen instances where Filene value giving scores by making a better article than the same price has bought before!

Better tailoring, even though the purchaser cannot see it; superior fur, even though tempted to use cheaper skins because "nobody would know;" a longer wearing lining when a cheaper one might do just as well; paying 25c a pair more for shoes to have first choice of the leathers.

These are the things that are building permanently for Filene's. These are the things that make Boston folk have confidence that even when Filene prices in the newspapers look like other prices there is always something added to the article to make it FILENE VALUE.

'ABIE' SEES 'JUST AROUND THE CORNER'

Every "Woman, Man and Child" Should See Fannie Hurst Film, He Says

By "ABIE THE AGENT"
Per Harry Hershfield.

"Listen, Minsk, there's a savage what says, 'distance lends enchantment.' And life is very much like a banquet photograph, to me—the fellers in the centre and back come out the nicest—the one in front, are way out of focus! And why, I am asking you?—because they are too near—too close! We can't get the right perspective on them, what is absolutely necessary!

"And that's the trouble with life—we try to pass over things that's right in front of us! But this fault was only before we got such cameras like Fannie Hurst.

BRINGS OUT DETAILS.

"It's a subject that you could pass over in a few words, if you was a city official, making a report—but in the hands of a woman like Miss Hurst, with heart, soul and technique, is a document for every woman, man and child to see!

HAPPENS EVERY DAY.

"If the story was simply something that might happen I wouldn't bother on one more second talking to you bout this picture—but this does happen, every day, every hour, just round our corners.

"Mothers will always be interested in their daughters, daughters will always be interested in fellers and fellers, some, will always be interested only in themselves—that is the commencing of a tragedy right there, Minsk!

"That is only the 'commencing.' In this 'Just Around the Corner' film they show you the net result of such a beginning."

COX AIDS MOVE TO RELIEVE UNEMPLOYMENT

In an effort to find some way of alleviating the present unemployment situation here, Governor Cox held two conferences with representatives of labor and business organizations. The first meeting was with Charles S. Davis of the maritime committee of the Boston Chamber of Commerce; Frank W. Wicher of the State Chamber of Commerce; and William McDonald of the Allied Metal Trades Council.

The project of bringing the Leviathan to Boston for refitting work was discussed, and it was agreed to send a delegation to Washington to confer with President Harding. At a second conference with State department heads, the Governor urged that public work be stimulated so as to provide more jobs.

Opera Star Who Is to Give a Concert in Brockton

EVELYN SCOTNEY

SCOTNEY MAKING FIRST TOUR IN THREE YEARS

Prima Donna Soprano Has Not Visited New England Since Husband Died

Evelyn Scotney, the prima donna soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, is making her first New England tour since the tragic death of her husband, Howard White, three seasons ago of the "flu."

Scotney and White were the most popular concert singers in this part of the country, and she had refused many offers to join the Metropolitan because she did not wish to give up concertizing in company with her husband. When he died suddenly at the age of thirty-six, Mme. Scotney felt unable to return to the familiar scenes, she accepted engagements from the Metropolitan Opera in New York but refused all offers to sing in New England for three years.

She is singing next Sunday night for the Day Nursery of Brockton at the City Theatre, Brockton, and in a few weeks will appear in Haverhill, Lynn and at Symphony Hall, Boston. Her Symphony Hall concert will occur February 12.

BUSINESS MEN HEAR CURLEY'S PLANS FOR HUB

New Postoffice, Better Streets and City Planning Board Are Among His Suggestions

A new Boston postoffice, better streets, a city planning board that will not only plan to spend money, but to earn it, the abolition of the truant school, abolition of the slums, and the establishing of a clearer and more definite plan for the park system are among the many suggestions the Mayor-elect James M. Curley offers to Boston business men at the City Club at a banquet given in his honor.

Several speakers, including President George H. Ellis of the City Club, Frederick S. Snyder of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, and George S. Smith, a former president of the club, preceded Curley and suggested many things that might be done to better Boston.

The Mayor-elect launched, with his usual vim, into the subject of making a better city of Boston. He declared that he would take office with no obligation except to remove the unfit, and he announced he would take pleasure in doing that. He touched on racial and religious prejudices and differences that should be eliminated in Boston and declared he wished some means of overcoming these prejudices might be devised.

He declared himself in favor of some system of standardization in the various city departments with a view to reducing expense. He also stated that he would attempt to find out if Boston is $3,500,000 ahead or behind, stating that at present experts do not seem to know.

He declared that as Massachusetts has men so prominent in national government it should not be difficult for them to obtain an appropriation of $10,000,000 for a new postoffice building for the city, declaring that as a modest one.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Elite Interested in Skating Carnival for Radcliffe

By BETTY ALDEN.

MEMBERS of Boston society, young and old alike, are manifesting considerable interest in the large skating carnival to be held next Tuesday evening at the Arena in aid of the Radcliffe College endowment fund. The matrons are serving on the committee in charge of the arrangements, a number of young men and women are to offer fancy skating "turns"—even the junior members of the Boston Skating Club will contribute to the affair by giving a playlet called "In Fairyland"—and of course a contingent including all ages of society number among the box holders.

A prominent member of the latter group is Miss Eleonora Sears, who is far too well known to need even the merest word of introduction. It is of interest to note, by the way, that Miss Sears seems to be taking an active part this season in the various affairs of the smart set. After a Summer spent abroad, where for a good part of the time she was an enthusiastic spectator at the international polo matches in England, Miss Sears returned to this country just in time to enjoy a bit of the North Shore season. I recall that this ardent sportswoman was among the Bostonians who went on to New York for the National Horse Show held in the metropolis this fall. Miss Sears has a large host of friends in Gotham, and when she arrived there for the horse show she was greeted on all sides with familiar faces.

The skating carnival next Tuesday evening, which promises something most unusual in the way of benefit functions, is under the direction of Miss Martha Thacher Brown of Beacon street, who has been working on the committee with her Mrs. Theresa Weld Blanchard, Miss Ethel Dodd, Miss Edith E. Rotch and her sister, Mrs. Channing Frothingham, Miss Constance Hall and Mrs. Kenneth S. Usher. The committee on patronesses includes Mrs. Charles K. Cummings, Mrs. Arthur Lyman and Mrs. Henry A. S. Dearborn. Other boxholders besides Miss Sears include Mesdames J. Montgomery Sears, George R. Agassiz, Allston Burr, J. Malcolm Forbes, William T. Aldrich, Arthur Lyman, A. Winsor Weld, Arthur Cabot, Arthur W. Blake, Edward W. Atkinson, Arthur G. Edwards, George U. Crocker, Joseph G. Thorp and Charles E. Mason.

Perhaps the most eagerly anticipated number on the program for the carnival is the short hockey game between a Radcliffe team and a team of Boston dubs, which is under the management of Miss Sarah Bradley and Miss Edith Nichols of Marlboro street and is said to be causing quite a noticeable ripple of excitement among members of the smart younger set. Also, some other society folk who have made skating one of their pet diversions will give original members under the title of the Boston fancy, arranged by Miss Edith Rotch. This number will be skated by a sextet of couples including Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Howland, Miss Ela DeT. Snelling and Courtney Crocker, Miss Martha Thacher Brown and Charles M. Rotch, Miss Edith Rotch and Francis Munro, Mis Ruth Yerxa and Sherwin C. Badger and Miss Edith Sigourney and Arthur Goodgrige.

Miss Brown and her committee have planned many short and spectacular numbers for the program besides these, and there will be skating after the close of the program at 10 o'clock for all ticket holders.

Until the 17th, the evening of the carnival, the public sale of tickets both for boxes and single chairs will be open at the Arena, at Wright & Ditson's and at Herrick's.

SALVATION ARMY COUNCIL IN SESSION

At the Council of the annual New England Congress of the Salvation Army Commissioner Thomas Estill, Eastern territorial leader, addressing the 250 officers, restated and endorsed the attitude of the Salvation Army toward worldliness, as demonstrated in the extremes of fashionable dress, adornment of the person, theatre-going, dancing, etc. His statement that on these questions the Salvation Army stood firmly by its original teaching was unanimously and enthusiastically endorsed by the Council.

PUBLIC WARNED OF RAISED BILL PASSERS

Warnings against a clever gang of counterfeiters who are raising Federal Reserve banknotes by pasting "20" numerals over the original numbers on the bills are issued by John J. McGrath, head of the local office of the U. S. Secret Service. A number of these persons have been active in this vicinity recently, he said. At the same time that he was issuing his warning, the Federal grand jury indicted Joseph Barbero of Chester street, North End, on a charge of passing some of the raised bills.

NOVEL EFFECTS FOR ANNUAL STAGE BALL

The annual benefit ball of the Boston Stage Employes, which last year attracted 8,000 people to Mechanics Hall, will be held at the same place on Thursday evening, January 19. The committee in charge declare that the event this year will be even more spectacular and interesting than the ball of 1921.

The most skillful stage mechanics in the city are now at work on a monster fountain, brilliant and novel lighting effects, unique decorations and stage settings and other delights for the public. Several ingenious and amusing surprises will be sprung also.

Among the notables who will attend will be Fred Stone, McIntyre and Heath, the Duncan sisters, William Hodge and many others. Invitations have been sent to a number of movie stars who are now in the East.

The entertainment will include a ballet of fifty on the stage, with a special elaborate stage setting and acts from several of the local theatres. Charles Frank's fifty-piece jazz band and the Starin Saxophone Sextette will furnish music for the dancing and there will be other music.

The committee in charge of arrangements for the ball consists of ex-Senator George E. Curran, Fred J. Dempsey, Frank Cunningham and William Gallagher.

BATES ARGUES FOR CONTROL BY STATE

Holyoke Women Hear Opposite Views on Commonwealth vs. County Rule

Holyoke, Jan. 11.—The struggle for control of the entire penal system of the State was carried into the western district today when Commissioner of Correction Sanford Bates and N. Seeley Hitchcock, commissioner of Hampshire County, debated the subject before a gathering of hundreds of women.

Commissioner Bates declared the equipment of the State was more adequate to carry out the ideas of criminal classification and segregation and to apply reformative measures.

The greatest indictment against the county control of prisons is illness, he said.

Presenting the other side, Mr. Hitchcock asserted that the sole intent of the bill now before the Legislature was to centralize all power within the State and disrupt county government. He pointed out that the prisoners in county institutions were there for average periods of forty-five days or less and could not be subjected to any of the corrective measures applied by the State in that time.

THOUSANDS ARE ENROLLED TO AID 'DRYS'

New Citizens' Alliance Aims to Arouse Sentiment for Prohibition

Prohibition may prohibit in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, according to the officials of the Citizens' Alliance of Massachusetts, an organization formed for the express purpose of arousing sentiment to obey the Volstead act.

This new organization has been formed quietly and has been enrolling thousands of members from all parts of the State, and is now planning its course of action.

According to present plans, the organization will not give physical aid in enforcing the prohibition law, but will enlist publicity as an aid.

The officials state that they will keep a watchful eye on the manner in which the law is being enforced. It will back up good officials, and "back up" the others. The organization officials believe that the publicity plan will be the best. The alliance is headed by the Rev. James J. Tillinghast.

The creed of the organization is "Let reverence for the law" becomes the political religion of the nation."

Fresh From Paris
Latest Word From Marie Suzanne

PARIS, France.

GOWNS for two hours of a Paris day choose, respectively, broadcloth and liberty satin as their fabrics. At the left, mulberry-colored broadcloth has bands done in an all over design of black braid. Narrow bands appear at each side of the bodice and at the sides of the gathered skirt panels both hiront and back, and wide bands of the cire embroidery edge these panels.

THE several points that drip from the gathered skirt of a black satin tea-hour gown are its features of greatest interest, making the hemline irregular and the silhouette charming. Lines of picot edged rose in black satin are another decided advantage. Its square-necked bodice is cut in one with a tiny beginning of sleeves, which turn into black chiffon and widen at the wrist.

Charles Confident of Returning to Hungary

Budapest, Jan. 11 (By the Associated Press).—"I regard Hungary as my fatherland. I am also convinced that I will return to Hungary." Former Emperor Charles is quoted as making this declaration to the correspondent of a Budapest newspaper at Funchal, Madeira, where he is in exile.

"I have the highest esteem for the loyalty of Count Andrassy, Count Apponyi and Count Sigray, and whatever happens I do not doubt the loyalty of the Hungarian nation," added Charles.

Count Hunyadi, a follower of the former Emperor, has been obliged to leave Funchal, being unable to bear the expenses of living there.

GIRL TO MARRY MAN INJURED BY RIVAL

Sick Bed Ceremony Scheduled to Take Place Soon in Somerville Hospital

A sick bed marriage will probably take place at the Somerville Hospital within a few days or the next few days when Miss Annie P. Croskery, twenty-two years old, of No. 10 Rush street, East Somerville, will become the bride of Thomas F. Kieley, 24 years old of No. 34 Mt. Pleasant st., East Somerville, who is on the danger list, suffering from injuries to his head, inflicted with an axe last Friday night, in the hands of a jealous rival.

ANNA CROSKERY

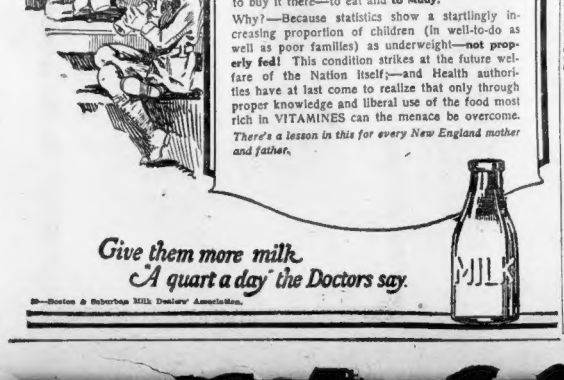
The wedding will probably take place a week from tonight at the rectory of St. Benedict's Church, in East Somerville.

Application for the marriage license was made by Miss Croskery at the office of the Somerville city clerk and when it was reported that there was a change for the worse in the condition of Mr. Kieley, she called at the office of the Somerville District Court and secured a five-day waiver from Judge Michael F. Farrell, so that the wedding could take place.

John J. Pullen, twenty-one, a boarder at the girl's home, who is charged with assault with a dangerous weapon with intent to kill Kieley, is at the East Cambridge jail in default of $10,000 bail, awaiting a hearing in the Somerville District Court next Monday when he will be represented by his counsel, Alderman Albert E. Hughes. Patrolmen James A. and Augustine J. Fitzpatrick found the axe in the house at No. 10 Rush street with which Pullen is alleged to have assaulted Kieley.

DISCUSS PLANS FOR WILSON MEMORIAL

Hamilton Holt, editor of the Independent, addressed a luncheon meeting of prominent men and women in the Copley-Plaza relative to the drive for a Woodrow Wilson memorial of $1,000,000, which will be begun next week in all parts of the country. Holt urged that the fund be subscribed to liberally, by people of all classes and all parties, remarking that "we are now in the big slump following the golden age of American statesmanship which came to an end two years ago." The former president's youngest daughter, Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, also spoke, as did Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell of Labrador fame.



Building Brain and Brawn

MILK is now a regular part of a child's daily schedule in almost every Public School. Youngsters everywhere are being taught to carry Milk to school or to buy it there—to eat and to study.

Why?—Because statistics show a startlingly increasing proportion of children (in well-to-do as well as poor families) as underweight—not properly fed! This condition strikes at the future welfare of the Nation itself;—and Health authorities have at last come to realize that only through proper knowledge and liberal use of the food most rich in VITAMINES can the menace be overcome.

There's a lesson in this for every New England mother and father.

CALL 15 WOMEN ON ARBUCKLE PANEL

Task of Selecting Jury for Second Trial of Comedian Expected to Be Speedy

San Francisco, Jan. 11.—There was every indication today, as the task of getting a jury to try Roscoe C. "Fatty" Arbuckle for a second time for manslaughter was undertaken in Superior Court, that women would be well represented among the twelve "peers" chosen to hear the evidence.

There are fifteen women in the panel of sixty-five jurors summoned by Judge Leuderback for duty today —eight of them married and seven single.

MRS. ANNA E. HUGHES, Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. Anna E. Hughes, 22 West Elm St., Chicago, an artist who enjoys a wide and enviable reputation for skill in china painting, in relating the facts of her remarkable experience with Tanlac, says:

"I haven't enjoyed such good health or felt so well in every way in years as I do now. Before I took Tanlac I was so run down that half an hour at my work would tire me completely out and I was actually so nervous and weak that at times the brush would fall from my hands and I would have to quit work for the rest of the day. Every night I would lie awake for hours, miserable and nervous.

"My improvement after the first few doses of Tanlac was rapid and constant. I'm happy to say I'm well and strong now and feel better than in twenty years. Tanlac deserves every word of praise I can give it."

Republican Party on Wilson's Road to Ruin

By PHILIP FRANCIS

If it had written into the political platform of its recent presidential campaign that the Republican administration, when elected, would negotiate a treaty of alliance with England, France and Japan before it had been a year in power, the Republican party never would have won the election.

The plain truth is that the Republican party campaigned under false pretenses, just as the Democratic party did when it elected Wilson to a second term by using the false pretense, "He kept us out of the war."

Wilson meant to put the country into the war, if he could sneak into power again under the declaration that he had kept us out of war and under the implication that he would keep on doing so.

The Republican party quoted the words and warnings of Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln, and opposed the League of Nations because it was a FOREIGN ALLIANCE. The obvious and unavoidable implication was that the Republican administration, when elected, would keep on opposing foreign alliances.

Yet the Republican administration negotiates and signs and endeavors to commit free and independent America to a hard-and-fast alliance with three foreign nations—and that within ten months after its election to office.

The Republican party has not kept faith with the people who voted for it. And that is neither square dealing nor good politics.

The Democratic party would be in power yet if Mr. Wilson had not been so incurably dishonest in politics. Had Wilson been frank and trustworthy and democratic, a Democratic President would today sit where Harding sits.

The Republican party will not remain in power through another election if it follows the discarded Democratic party policy of political dishonesty. If Mr. Harding follows Mr. Wilson's wabbly tracks, the Republican party will be thrown out of power precisely as the Democratic party was thrown out.

Honesty is not only the best political policy. It is ONLY political policy.

This proposed alliance is a deliberate betrayal of the men and women who voted the Republican ticket and elected a Republican ticket on the public pledges of the party platform and the party's candidates.

It is a treacherous repudiation and a deliberate violation of the declarations of the platform and the personal utterances of the candidates plainly and persistently repeated.

It is a dishonest reversal of promises and pledges at home, just as it is a stupid and dangerous reversal of our time-tried policy of non-entanglement abroad.

If the Republican Senators ratify this foreign alliance, they will sign the death warrant of the Republican party THAT DAY.

They may not believe what we say. But they will not have to live long to see for themselves that we speak the truth.

It will not be the first time, either, that some of them have laughed at our forecasts and warnings and lived to regret their laughter and to acknowledge that we were right.

That was not because we claim any mental superiority or any extraordinary political clairvoyance.

It was simply because the Hearst papers are in close touch with the people and deal honestly with them, and because we know that the immutable law of politics is that honesty and square dealing win repeated elections, while dishonesty and pledge-breaking can never win more than once.

The American people will forgive any mistakes a public official makes, if he is honest and keeps his campaign promises. But they have no further use for any official who wins an election with pledges he does not afterward keep.

They know square dealing and they know false pretenses in politics.

Mr. Hughes is another Wilson—vain, obstinate, opinionated, insincere—and he is leading the Republican party along the same identical path that Mr. Wilson led the Democratic party.

The same pit of political destruction is still at the end of the same path, and when Mr. Hughes and Mr. Root and Mr. Lodge have got the Republican party to the end of the path, it will fall into that pit exactly as the Democratic party did.

JEWISH DRIVE IS OVER A QUARTER SUBSCRIBED

First Report of Team Captains Made at Luncheon at City Club

Team captains in the drive to funds by the Federated Jewish Charities of Boston rendered their first reports at a luncheon at the City Club today.

The drive is for a fund of $400,000 to support about 25 Jewish charities in the city. The quota for today was $100,650 and great enthusiasm was manifested when the team captains reported approximately $1,000 more than the quota.

The drive will close January 18 and reports will be made at a luncheon every other working day until the campaign ends. Several team captains reported sums in advance of their expectations for the entire week, and were heartily applauded.

Alfred W. Kaftenburgh, who presided in the absence of Chairman Louis E. Kirstein, stated that there were several subscriptions, made before the campaign began, which would be allotted to the several teams before next Friday's luncheon, and which would have swelled today's total if time had been allowed for allotting them.

He stated that the solicitors must strive earnestly for new subscribers, claiming that one of the team captains had informed him that only 10 per cent. of the Jews in an important trade in the city had been subscribers previously.

He urged the solicitors to search out every one who should support Jewish charities and show the world that it is no idle boast "that the Jews can take care of their own."

HARVEY ATTENDS CANNES MEETING

Cannes, Jan. 11 (By the Associated Press)—George Harvey, American Ambassador to Great Britain, attended today's session of the Allied Supreme Council, having almost completely recovered from the shock he suffered in an automobile accident on Monday. Members of the council heartily congratulated him on his escape from serious injury.

$5,000 for Senator Walsh in Will of Thomas E. Dwyer

The will of Thomas E. Dwyer of Wakefield, filed today in Middlesex County, contains a bequest of $5,000 to U. S. Senator David I. Walsh. Dwyer was a prominent Democratic politician. The estate amounts to $150,000. Of this $10,000 was left to St. Joseph's Church of Medford for chimes, and the same amount for the same purpose to St. Joseph's of Wakefield. There was a provision that the money would revert to the estate if it were not used for chimes. Two thousand went to the Wakefield Lodge of Elks, and the same amount to the Wakefield K. of C. Senator Walsh is named executor.

Dexter Bldg. BOSTON FUR SHOP INC. 453 Washington St. Third Floor

3 Doors From Winter St. Take Elevator

Can you name today the cars in any given price class?

Do you realize that in the past year there have taken place more changes in the relative standings and price-classifications of motor cars than ever before in the history of the automobile?

This means that the prospective buyer of a new car must revise his previous information on motor car specifications and prices.

That he needs the aid of complete and authoritative tables of technical specifications and equipment of all passenger cars, as well as detailed summaries of the makes falling into each of the various price-range divisions.

The Forty Points

There are about forty essential features of motor car construction that should form the bases of comparisons for the competent selection of a motor car.

Price, passenger-capacity, and number of cylinders are but three of these major points of differentiation. Others are: make, model, and type of engine; horse-power and R.P.M. peak; cylinder bore and stroke; cooling system; oiling system; average mileage per gallon of gasoline; type of rear axle; braking system; wheel-base; tires and springs; weight.

Makes of chassis use, together with electrical equipment, bearing equipment, and engine equipment, are also important factors to be considered in choosing the car best adapted to the individual's transportation requirements.

350 Pictures of New Cars

All of this information, together with 350 photographs and drawings of all new models and new makes of cars, covering the entire American field, is available in concise, orderly and easily followed form in the great Annual Show and Reference Number of Motor, the 1922 issue, dated January, now being sold on the newsstands.

This gigantic special number, always selling at the unprecedented price of one dollar per copy, is an automobile show on paper, and more!

A Year Book

It is the year book of the automobile industry, summarizing the past twelve-months' achievements, recording present trends and tendencies, and forecasting, through the leaders of motordom, the probable developments of the near future.

Every department and every phase of motor interest is covered in this jumbo magazine, including related subjects of interest to both sexes and to all ages.

Every Subject covered

Included are such subjects as fuels, good roads, racing, body design, new improvements in equipment, and new features generally, motor apparel, and a great variety of practical, helpful and informative articles for the owner-driver, and his wife.

The dominating position in the motor industry, now held by Motor for many years, insures the up-to-dateness, completeness, and reliability of Motor's articles as they appear in Motor's monthly issues.

Any motorist will find an annual subscription to Motor a good investment, adding much to the pleasure and satisfaction derived from his car. Every motorist, and certainly every intending purchaser of a new car, will find that a dollar expended for the January Annual Show and Reference Number of Motor, will prove a wise act.

An Automobile Show in Itself

The Automobile Shows give opportunity for first-hand impressions of the cars, but Motor presents, in systematically recorded form, the detailed facts regarding every car's construction, for careful comparison and analysis at leisure. This issue of Motor supplements the Show to those who attend it; it is the Show to those who are prevented from getting to the car exposition.

No one person could gather from any show alone, nor in many weeks of continuous show-visiting, the wealth of data available in this issue of Motor.

Get your copy before you attend the show. You will find it a guide to what is most interesting to you personally, saving you time and steps and guarding against your overlooking any particular make of your desired type of car.

Doctors Stand Amazed at Power of Bon-Opto to Make Weak Eyes Strong—According to Dr. Lewis

Guarantee to Strengthen Eyesight 50% In One Week's Time in Many Instances

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home

Philadelphia, Pa. Victims of eyestrain and other eye weaknesses, and those who wear glasses, will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope and help for them. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored by this remarkable prescription and many who now wore glasses say they have thrown them away. One man says, after using it: "I was almost blind. Could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without my glasses and my eyes do not hurt any more. At night they would pain dreadfully. Now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for 15 days everything seems clear. I can read even fine print without glasses. Another who used it says: "Was bothered with eye strain caused by overworked, tired eyes, which caused fierce headaches. Was practically blind for several years before. Glasses aided me but little. Now they are useless. I can read without glasses and do not have headaches any more. I can do both now and discarded my long distance glasses altogether. I can count the lightning leaves on the trees across the street now, which for several years have looked like a dim, green blur to me. I cannot express my joy at what it has done for me."

It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by the use of this prescription. Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and let it dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two or four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation and redness will quickly disappear. If your eyes bother you even a little it is your duty to take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have saved their sight if they had cared for their eyes in time.

NOTE: Another prominent Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Yes, Bon-Opto prescription is truly a wonderful eye remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to me and are used by many eminent eye specialists and while prescribed by them. I have used it very successfully in my own practice on patients whose eyes were strained through overwork or wilful abuses. I can highly recommend it in case of weak, watery, aching, smarting, itching, burning eyes, red lids, blurred vision or eyes inflamed from exposure to smoke, sun, dust or wind. It is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand by (nearly) every family. Bon-Opto, (pronounced Bonn-o-pto) as well as I remember, was introduced in this country by the Marchesa Boncompagni, who publicly guarantees it to strengthen weak eyes 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is sold in this city by the usual druggists.

RISK DEATH IN ESCAPE FROM HAREMS

Miss Peabody of Wellesley Tells of Captivity of Armenian Girls in Turkey

Many Armenian girls are prisoners in Turkish harems, Miss Marion Peabody of Wellesley reported today on her return from 18 months spent in charge of a house of refuge established by the Near East Relief in Turkey.

MARION PEABODY

Several Armenian girls have risked death in escaping from the harems. Many leave their offspring behind them, because of their Turkish fathers. Miss Peabody had 150 of these fugitives in her care, organizing industrial and educational classes for them.

Returned relief workers will be decorated with medals at exercises to be held at the State House at noon on Monday. The Massachusetts Committee on Near East Relief announces that Z. Marshall Crane of Dalton, who directed the organization of industrial work in Armenia and Dr. George H. Washburn of Commonwealth avenue, medical director of a relief expedition sent to Turkey in 1919, will receive medals in addition to those named in a list previously announced.

Miss Esther F. Green, a Rhode Island worker, will come to Boston to receive her medal.

Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear. DRUG ADDICTS ARE 'MARKED' PERSONS

Color of Skin, Expression of Eyes and Mouth Betray Them, Says Dr. Ruth

Drug addicts may easily be distinguished from all other persons. When the deadly narcotic grips a person, it leaves many marks. They may be found on all "dope fiends," and the physical torture experienced by one is typical of that endured by all.

Competent authorities estimate there are 65,000 drug slaves in Massachusetts, and some 2,000,000 in the United States. The number is growing fast.

Dr. Erwin C. Ruth, chief of the narcotic division of the Internal Revenue Department here, has trailed violators of the Federal narcotic law in every State of the Union. He has come in contact with thousands of "dope fiends."

"Drug addicts may be divided into two general classes," said Dr. Ruth. "There is the tramp or down-and-out, who shifts about for his drugs and mere existence. This type is in the majority, and is the greatest economic burden on society. Seldom are they addicted to more than one kind of narcotic.

PICTURES "DRUG ADDICT."

"The addicts fortunate (or unfortunate) to have sufficient means to provide themselves with 'dope' and subsistence, are in the minority. They may use morphine, opium, heroin or cocaine. They may be addicted to but one of the drugs.

"The 'tramp addict'—the most typical and conspicuous—usually has been consuming the poison drugs hypodermically for one year or more. He or she is most often very thin, emaciated—a human skeleton, so to speak.

"They have the color of death, or a lifeless yellow complexion. The expression of the eyes and mouth are often ghastly, owing to the wasting away of flesh about them, and to their ever-present fearful delusions and sufferings.

"Veins usually stand out prominently, with increased pulsation. Their teeth decay and fall from their mouths; their eyes often bulge, with drooping lids and the white portion becomes unusually bright, while the iris becomes slightly milky.

EYE PUPILS CONTRACT.

"The pupil in the eye of the morphinist is closely contracted, when under the influence of the drug. The contraction is fixed and change from darkness to light or vice versa does not alter this condition.

"Cocaine is generally used in connection with morphine by the typical addict. The action on the eyes by the combination of these drugs causes uneven opening of the pupils, occasionally being elliptical in shape, or one may be dilated and the other contracted.

"A 'dope fiend' can be readily detected by these variations in the pupils of his eyes and by the quick, jerky glances that are characteristic of the victims. The hair becomes dry, thin and silky and the ears appear translucent.

"A drug addict loses all sense of what neatness is. He will manage to have a necktie about his neck, no matter how dirty both the neck and necktie may be. His clothes will be soiled, torn and threadbare.

SUFFER HALLUCINATIONS.

"The 'dopie' walks with a rapid, jerky gait and swings his arms with the same, characteristic movement. His swift-moving, slender hands will be at his throat one second and running through his hair the next second.

"When immediate action of the drugs has been exhausted the addict becomes very restless, irritable, distressed and more ghastly. He will move more slowly, usually dragging his heels at every step. When he goes an unusually long time without 'dope,' the physical torture is beyond description; his body pains all over and his one thought is how to get more 'dope,' as a drowning man gasps for air.

"The 'dope fiends' have gruesome, distressing hallucinations, and while in this condition might jump out of a window or do bodily harm.

BECOME DEGRADED.

"The addict using considerable cocaine has a very wild, insane appearance, and it is this type which is the most dangerous and becomes totally demented. These commit crime readily.

"Cocainism develops a mental alienation, with a change of hallucinations and corresponding delusions, ending with melancholia on withdrawal of the drug.

"This type, after a prolonged period of cocaine debauchery, becomes very much degraded. They have both hallucinations of sight and hearing, causing them to jump, scream or run unexpectedly.

"The more prosperous 'dope fiend' cannot always be readily recognized by the inexperienced person, although his appearance is typical and can easily be detected after having closely observed one of his kind. 'Dope fiends' live and can be located in every section of Boston, and quite often they may be members of unsuspecting families."

CAN OF WATER EXPLODES, BOY BADLY SCALDED

Charles Babcock, thirteen years old, of No. 44 St. Martin street, Charlestown, was badly burned about the face and shoulders when a can of water which had been hung over a bonfire at Dewey Bench, where he and some playmates were gathered, exploded and showered him with scalding water. He was taken to the Relief Hospital.

ALLEGED AUTO THIEF IS HELD FOR TRIAL

Herman K. Nickerson, twenty-five years old, who has been sought by the police ever since he was indicted by former District Attorney Tufts of Middlesex County for automobile stealing, in company with a number of others, was arrested on a Cambridge subway train by Special Officer Charles Mallahan of the Cambridge force, who recognized him from descriptions the police have issued.

Nickerson was taken to the station and later arraigned in court to answer to twelve indictments, one charging conspiracy and the other eleven charging automobile stealing. He is held for trial in $12,000 bail. During the time since his indictment, he told the police, he has been in Detroit, Chicago and Montreal.

CAMBRIDGE MAN GIVEN STIFF SENTENCE

Cheap Bread—or GOOD Bread?

Certain chain store interests are featuring the fact that they must have bread to sell at pre-war prices. They ignore the fact that good flour is still about $3.00 higher than the pre-war level, to say nothing of other materials.

Real philanthropy should be encouraged: Far be it from us to question the motive, but

We Know This—

Cheap bread made by substracting valuable food properties is no bargain.

By baking a mixture of cheap flour, water, salt and yeast and selling this loaf unwrapped we could cut our cost considerably, because HATHAWAY is equipped to make bread as cheap as anybody.

This is the kind of bread commonly sold by bakers 30 years ago, when bakers' bread was in general disrepute. Not until the baker began to use real high-grade materials did he gain any standing with the housewife.

Anybody Can Bake Cheap Bread

But this kind of bread would disappoint and discourage your family and the few cents a week you would save on its purchase would subtract valuable nutriment and body-building qualities from your diet.

It takes knowledge and experience to make and our experience of 45 years has proved that people want real value and nutriment in the bread they select.

That is why we use over 6000 quarts of fresh milk daily and the best materials money can buy in the production of HATHAWAY'S BREAD.

We aim to please the public whose kind patronage supports our business. When GOOD bread can be made cheaper HATHAWAY will make it.

FRANCE'S WOMAN BOXER WANTS TO MEET AMERICAN TITLE HOLDER

LOTS OF SPILLS AND THRILLS! This "double ripper" is a snow novelty from Switzerland. Has handles and saddles just like a real bike. Easily made and loads of fun. Better than a sled. (Underwood.)

A PAIR O' SWEETIES! The one that looks like a cane with the cramps is none other than the world's largest sweet potato, grown on a farm near Los Angeles by Miss Marie Moffett. It is 4 feet long and weighs 8 pounds. It attained this size only by the most careful culture. (International.)

REV. JAMES LEWIS, a Denver, Col., pastor, wants all surrounding towns without ministers to hear a sermon at least once a week, so he has installed a microphone in his church. More than 100 amateur operators "listen" to his weekly talk in this manner. (Underwood.)

PUT AND TAKE! Ed Kohler, a conductor on a street railway running into Pasadena, Cal., is the only nickel chaser in the world to pay an income tax of five figures. You're wrong, Oscar, his money was left him. (Wide World.)

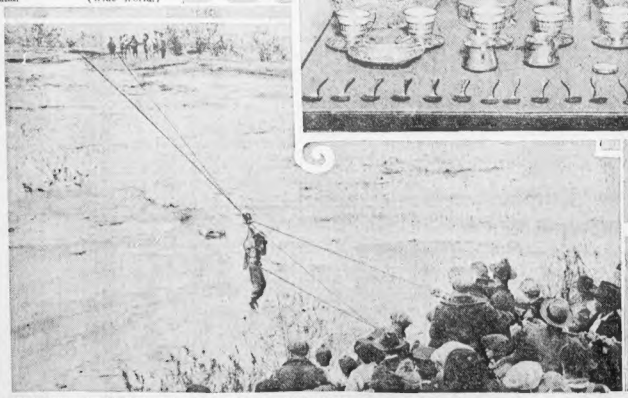
PRETTY SOFT! Not only the coat, but the fortunate youngster that will wear it. This garment, of Alaska seal-skin, will set a proud father back just $500, and is the high-water mark in the price of children's wearing apparel. The coat was made for the child of one of our new millionaires.

THOMAS A. HUSTON, former national billiard champion, who has posted forfeit for a match with Ralph Greenleaf, national professional champion. (Fotograms.)

TOO PROUD TO LAY! This little hen, 18 months old, has never laid an egg, walks erect, and will not associate with larger hens. Shown perched on top of a snowman. Has been taught many tricks. (International.)

OH, SPLASH! Miss Mildred Ellett of Miami, Fla., who won $1,000 in the Southeastern Florida Beauty Contest, just closed. Miss Ellett wouldn't stand a chance with our New England beauties. (International.)

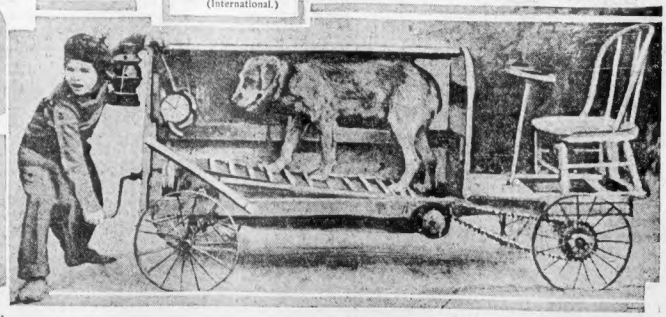
MAKE WAY FOR A REAL CAR! This is the smallest electrically driven motor car in the world, we are told. It can travel the terrible speed of 12 miles an hour, and is owned by Mark Lupino, a London actor. He gets considerable publicity by traveling from city to city in it. (Wide World.)



THE BOYS HAD LOTS OF FUN, ANYWAY! During the recent high water in California, several boys were attracted to a small island in one of the streams near Los Angeles. The water was about knee deep, so the youngsters had no difficulty in reaching the islet in safety. Shortly afterward, however, the flood gates of a dam were opened, transforming the sewer into a raging torrent. The youngsters were cut off and in danger of being swept off the island. Los Angeles Fire Department was notified and they were rescued by means of improvised breeches buoy. Photo shows them rescuing first boy. (Underwood.)

JIMMY BRONNER, 12 (above), is America's youngest crack trapshooter. He is here pictured with a few of his many trophies. Was given his first rifle when he was 4. Lives in N. Y. (Fotograms.)

HAROLD L. HART, former prohibition chief in N. Y., who has been released in $5,000 bonds on charges of having negotiated fake permits for withdrawal of millions in liquor. Hart is most prominent of 20 taken in custody. (International.)



A DOG-GONE-GOOD-MOBILE! This Chicago youngster has borrowed an idea from the old-fashioned treadmill, with ol' Towser replacing the horse. You probably think this boy is Jackie Coogan, but he's not. Coy Watson, Jr., is the name his mother calls him. He earns his living by acting, and just to prove that he's clever he is impersonating the young Mr. Coogan. His new 1922 Dogomobile is one bow-wow power and can go 100 miles on 10 bones (not dollars), which is more than a John henry can. Note the sausage in front of the dog as a teaser. (Underwood.)

Charley White says he will knock out Johnny Dundee when he battles [illegible] Sept. 30 in the feature bout [illegible] ten rounds at the Fanueil A. C.'s [illegible] show at Mechanics Building Monday night. White writes from Chicago as follows:

"I intend to knock out Dundee at the Faneuil Club's show. That's the best way for me to force Benny Leonard into the ring for a title battle.

Dundee is the junior lightweight champion of America. If I can stop Leonard will have to give me consideration.

I am glad I am fighting Dundee in Boston. The Hub has always been a lucky city. When I hit 'em in Boston they don't seem to get up.

"Dundee, of course, is fast, but he is not as shifty as he was in the old days. I recently battled him to a draw in New York. I have his number and will win by a knock. Then for Leonard whom I all but knocked out when we clashed in the West."

Henry Myers writes:

"Freddie Madden, the uncrowned bantamweight champion of New England, was at the ringside at Lynn and saw Paddy Owens give Johnny Shepard a good licking.

"Madden is on the warpath. He has been chasing Owens for a year but Paddy still refuses to sign articles for a fight with him. If Jack Williams, Owens' manager, will consent to a Madden-Owens bout, I stand ready to post a substantial forfeit and let it go as a side bet that Madden can knock Owens out inside of ten rounds.

"After Madden knocks Owens out he will go after Abe Friedman, Boston Ed's star roller skater, and give him a good whirling.

"I believe Freddie Madden is the best bantamweight in New England, and Freddie is only too eager to convince the fans that I am right in my boast by meeting them and Let us back up their judgment by making the managers of the other bantam weight boxers will find me ready to back my statements with real dough.

"If the promoters in Boston or Lynn really want a good match Owens-Madden, Friedman-Madden or any boy Madden's weight they can have it. Madden is ready to meet them all."

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES

It takes money to do things—as you probably have discovered.

One very strong reason for expecting better business and more employment this year is the increasing plentifulness of money available for those capable of doing things in the business world.

* * *

The cost of money, like the cost of most things, also is declining. Wall Street brokers were able to borrow day-to-day funds this week at the extraordinarily low rate of 3 per cent. Such a rate had not been quoted since November, 1919. If the bankers were wise, even this low rate could be saved, because, I understand, they cannot find users for all their funds, and are keeping millions off the market so as not to break the rental rate to smithereens.

* * *

Money can now be borrowed for six months at 4½ per cent., which is a shade the lowest quotation in a long time. Here, also, the supply is larger than the demand, and it is questionable if a further decline will be long stayed off by lenders. This week also has brought a new low charge for discounting bills—accepted by bankers and thus made available for borrowing on at the Federal Reserve bank. The new rate is 4 per cent.

All the likelihood is that the Federal Reserve re-discount rate of 4½ per cent (at New York) will be reduced before the new year is much older.

* * *

Enterprising industrial, mining, mercantile and other leaders will expand their activities when they can obtain capital at low rates, whereas they would hesitate to do so were the rental rates for capital high. How the cost of capital has fallen during recent months can be best made clear by giving a few specific figures.

* * *

Last year foreign governments had to issue bonds carrying no less than 8 per cent. interest. Today the usual rate carried by foreign government issues is 6 per cent.; and it may be that by and by we shall see a 6 per cent. return on such investments.

Incidentally, our own Liberty Bonds have advanced from around 85 to within a few points of 100, a fact very gratifying to those who have been fortunate enough to be able to hold on to their government securities during these rocky times.

Industrial and public utility companies can now float new securities at 1 per cent. less than they had to pay last year. The Northwestern Bell Telephone Company, for illustration, saw its 7 per cent. obligations selling last year around 90, or on a basis to yield the holder 7 13-3 per cent.; these same securities are now quoted around 107, giving a yield of 6 3-5 per cent.

* * *

Railroad bonds are also now salable on less burdensome terms. It is gradually becoming possible for strong railroad systems to float off obligations carrying very high interest rates and issue new obligations carrying lower rates. We learn Pennsylvania 4½ per cent. bonds, which last year were down to 76, are now more than 5 points higher; in other words, they yielded fully 6 1-8 per cent. last year, as contrasted with only 5 1-3 per cent. today. New York Central 4½ per cent. bonds meanwhile have jumped from 82 to 104, yielding only slightly better than 4½ per cent. at the latter figure. Atchison 4 per cent. bonds which were down to 72 are now above 86, giving a present-day return of less than 4¾ per cent.

* * *

Most bankers admit privately that they look for still lower interest rates within the next few months. If this proves correct, it will mean that the right kind of business up-builders will be able to get the capital on still more attractive terms. It was John D. Rockefeller who once remarked to me, when I asked him what had been the hardest problem of all his business career, "To be able to get all the money necessary to do all the business I could do." A great many wide-awake, progressive, enterprising business men could truthfully make the same confession.

It is not tremendously important, therefore, that things are so shaping themselves that borrowers of the aggressive, constructive type will be note from now on to get hold of capital in larger volume and on very attractive terms.

* * *

This country is blessed with a great number of broad-gauge men who are full of irrepressible ambition and who also possess the brains necessary to enable them to make money through the use of money. In other words, they have acquired the "know how." We have a lot about America's productive capacity having been expanded for beyond immediate requirements. But there is no scarcity of enterprising heavyweights who have plans for profitable projects and who are waiting only for the right moment and the money to go ahead. The spirit of enterprise has not been killed by any means.

* * *

Just reflect on what has been here set down and then open your newspaper, and find as you probably will occasionally in the next sixty days that some of the breakage caused by the recent stormy seas has come to the surface.

Stocks Close Strong in New York; Money 3½%; Liberty Bonds in Big Demand

PRICES CLIMB LATE IN THE SESSION

Oils, Steels, Coppers, Sugars and Specialties Highest in the Afternoon

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

The New York market was strong at the close. Oils, steels, copper and some specialties reached the highest level in the last hour. Rumors and wavered in the afternoon and prices climbed as a rule in all parts of the list. Trading was of record volume, transactions approximating half a million shares. Foreign exchange rates rallied late in the day.

Issues to end with the largest gains included American Tobacco, Lorillard, Gulf States Steel, Computing, Tabulating and Recording, Butte and Superior, Houston, General Electric, Corn Products, Pan American, Mexican Petroleum, Texas Company, Union Pacific and Studebaker Products. They were up from one to nearly four points. Food Products recovered part of the loss. Losses were few and fractional. Tobaccos became strong and active late in the session. Rails improved but remained quiet.

The upward movement continued through the second hour and over odd day, with bonds attracting more attention than stocks at noontime. Demand for Liberty issues, however, reached unprecedented proportions. Sales of these securities approximated $15,000,000 at par value by the end of noon. Victory 4½ notes sold at a record high. Increased demand was reported from all quarters. Coppers were higher because of a continuation of improved sales. Pool activities helped a number of issues. But wire troubles due to the storm diminished trading in stocks. Sales of copper reached an 3½ per cent. Foreign exchange was unsteady at the start and irregular at the close.

BETTER TONE AT START.

Although initial changes were small the market had a better tone at the opening, gains exceeding losses. some overnight covering helped the list. It was indirect by opposition that the New York Federal Reserve Bank would reduce its rediscount rate to 4 per cent. on notes of 100 days. The rates have contributed to confidence and the small gain in U. S. Steel unfilled tonnage last month improved hope that the industrial situation has begun to improve. The price movement was upward for thirty minutes and during the balance of the first hour the market remained steady. By mid-morning it was strong on the whole. Crucible took a course contrary to the list in general. It sold at its lowest for this year to date.

OILS ALLIED.

Oils rallied at the outset and lead the market for strength and activity. Standard Oil of New Jersey advancing 2 points, four points before midmorning. Doheny issues opened with small losses but soon showed small gains. Pan American A improved a little. Pressure on, Chicago & Northwestern "refunding" was reported. Rumors were quoted as saying to a Boston banker: "If you will tell me when the steel business is going to get better I will tell you when Northwestern is coming back." Mining products constituted about half of its traffic normally. Erie issues gained fractionally. President Underwood wired a shareholder regarding stock exchange rumors: "Rumors of receivership are propagated by interested persons for reasons you may surmise." Steels had a strong tone, while sugars, tires, motors and coppers ruled higher. Food Products was active and advanced a couple of points during the afternoon. Mail Department Stores and Famous Players were other specialties to make good showing. Government withdrawals from New York banks tomorrow will total $7,000,000.

RAILROADS NOW IN BAD FIX, SAYS EVANS

Expert Assigns Many Reasons Why Stocks Make Poor Showing

By C. B. EVANS

Chicago, Jan. 11.—The farmer is getting the short end of the deal, the capitalist, 59 for his Chicago & Northwestern, this is the message of the West to the East, and across the Atlantic it anybody over there takes any interest in us they should know.

Chicago & Northwestern is a point or two better today than yesterday though the public has learned that there will be a deficit for 1921 of $13,000,000 after the dividend is paid. Many people go out of their way to look for reasons in this case as in the affair of other railroads, but the reason is plain enough on the surface.

In addition to the attrition of income and ever-present fear that there is lack of harmony in the management of the property, that consequently there is drifting along the prevails where zeal should keep every official hard at it and that there is no probability of a change in management. But the lowest price in a score of years naturally breeds many rumors, the correctness of which one cannot vouch for.

NOT EVEN WHISTLING.

Along through the Chicago and Northwestern country trails its erring sister, Chicago Milwaukee & St. Paul, with price not in the respectable class and the railroad not in the stocks not even whistling to keep their courage up.

In another property, not strictly Western, Chicago investors and speculators have been misinformed from time to time: that in Erie partly, no doubt primarily through the leadership of the late Norman B. Ream. The spectacle of its common stock selling Monday at seven was less impressive than the recent declines in Chicago and Northwestern, both important properties, it is conceded of Erie.

The prediction that it will default on $3,000,000 of notes due on war finance corporation in April was perhaps the basis of much of the decline but good authorities declare that there will be no default and that a receivership is not in prospect.

REFUNDING OPERATIONS.

In confirmation of these statements refunding operations in former years are cited by friends of the road. The Pennsylvania road has also declared nevertheless there is material for nervousness on the part of the stock and bond holders' committee in the face of various amounts from 1923 to 1927 not to mention a small one in May 1922.

The net earnings of the company in the first ten months of 1921, decreased over $20,000,000 and even with the liabilities constantly maturing, although the company's credit has not be allowed to fall. Accordingly they declare that it behooves everyone for holders to let go their common stock at current prices.

That Erie has gone to the verge of bankruptcy and has grown accustomed to its property something like $150,000,000, more than half of which rests on the ground, and it has stood while all its likes of former years have fallen.

WHAT AILS THEM.

The same thing ails Erie and Chicago & Northwestern that ails every other railroad in the United States, will all sorts of differences in degree and that thing is the combination of the bad times, the high cost of labor and, back of all, government control.

And back of the government control is politics, who finds the railroads, and has always found them, the biggest target for his attacks, the motive in the supposed popularity of that policy among his constituents. It is of these things he made the record of 1,200 miles loss of railroads in this country in 1921, times like this.

By MONITOR

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—Stocks to day na ved within a very narrow range, and most of the price changes were limited to fractions. Such irregularity as was displayed was due to the in-and-out operations of the professional element. So far as the news directly bearing on the market was concerned this might be considered of a favorable nature. Call money renewed at the lowest price in more than two years, 3½ per cent., and declined to 3 at the close. The United States Steel Corporation reported an increase of more than 17,000 tons in unfilled orders, whereas a week ago the Street had been looking for a decline of 100,000 tons.

MOVEMENTS in the market were without special significance. Several issues that had been heavily sold in the last two or three days received rather sharply. Among these were Chicago & Northwestern and the Erie issues. The oils were irregular, with Mexican Petroleum declining more than two points with a fair recovery later. Selling of Texas Company continued, and this stock closed at the bottom. General Asphalt, after a period of early weakness, rallied and closed at a net gain of nearly one point.

MUCH of the optimism displayed at the close of the year his disappeared, notwithstanding the progress made in Congress and the strength in the foreign exchanges. Much of this loss of confidence is due to the rejection of the legislative program at Washington, and the recalcitrant attitude of certain groups of legislators who have arrogated to themselves the championship of the farmers. The feeling that the proposed tariff bill will be an economic blunder, that the passage of the bonus bill will result in financial distress, and other evidences of legislative inanitude at Washington do not tend to stimulate executive effort. A prominent statistician also has issued a monthly letter emphasizing the point of gloom with which the close of 1921 left us.

IT is of course possible that the scattered liquidation incident to the season has thrown some unfavorable features into the holder relief than would be otherwise the case, and this would be somewhat the position of the market become stronger the more hopeful aspects of the situation will be revealed.

THE unfilled tonnage of the United States Steel Corporation showed an increase of 17,872 tons. As December operations were at the rate of 500,000 tons and incoming orders were approximately 1,000,000 tons per month, 1,500 tons less daily than in November. It is expected that a similar decline will be shown during the current months, but real activity is not expected before March or April.

BUYING in Chicago & Northwestern during the early part of the session was reported to be in part for some of the officials of that company. Traders who had sold the stock to cover their commitments on learning that the 10,000-share selling order was completed found it difficult to get it executed at the low prices. Buying advanced more than three points from Monday's low and closed within a fraction of the top.

THERE was an accumulation of selling orders overnight in many issues with the result that the activity at the opening was on a large scale in values. This was true notably in Mexican Petroleum, which opened a point higher. Some support made its appearance and in the afternoon a rally ensued. Transactions were largely professional.

IN Baldwin Locomotive the selling was described as of excellent character. It did not follow the price down, but was in evidence on the rally late in the afternoon. Baldwin advanced from 93 in June to par plus a $3 dividend on the way to 120 points. It is natural that such an advance should bring profit-taking on a considerable scale and the present reactionary tendency is due to the technical position of the stock itself rather than to any change in the affairs of the company.

A REPORT from Pittsburg that the Aetna Standard plant of the American Sheet & Tin Plate Company has resumed operations in full, as have three of the same company's plants in the Wheeling district, failed to stimulate buying of the steel stocks. The financial district is awaiting the publication of the annual reports of the steel companies before taking a decided position in these issues.

CALL RATE IS REDUCED IN BOSTON

Local Stock Market Dull, but Firm; Curb Trading Quiet as Prices Decline

The Boston market was dull but firm during the forenoon. Fluctuations were narrow at the opening and afterwards. Trading had no breadth. By noon the majority of active issues were up a little. Largest gains were Calumet & Hecla 4, Mohawk 1¾, and Warren Brothers first preferred 1. Isle Royale and Massachusetts Gas receded a point but the last named partly recovered. The market was without feature. Swift & Company was the only active packing stock and gained a fraction. American Telephone advanced nearly a point and was one of the most prominent issues. Utilis were neglected. Coppers were quiet and irregular. Two of the largest Boston banks have reduced their call rate to 5 per cent. It has long stood at 6% per cent. in this city.

Strength was retained in the afternoon as regards the market as a whole, but it was listless. Superior of Boston sold at 72, extending the gain for this exchange. American Pneumatic sold preferred at 25, highest in more than a year. United Drug and Pacific Mills were up a point and. American Woolen common advanced 1¾.

CURB WEAKENED.

After a fifth opening the Curb market weakened. It was dull all the morning. The most active issues were Boston and Montana, Mutual and Northern States. At noon New Idria was up 1 cent at 61 cents, Alpha 1 cent at 18 cents, International Sugar 1 cents at 84 cents, Palisade 3 cents at 12 cents and Mexican Silver Metal 1 cent at 3 cents. Among declines were Boston and Montana 5 cents at 76 cents, Mutual 11 cents at 35 cents, Northern States 2 cents at 38 cents, Sagdad 2 cents at 38 cents, Crystal 1 cent at 63 cents, Hecla Divide 1 cent at 4 cents, Pilgrim 1 cent at 5 cents, Boston Ely 1 cent at 7¾ cents and United Verde Extension 1 cent at 23 cents. Eureka lost an opening of one cent.

BUSINESS URGES RECOGNITION OF MEXICO

Mutual Gain Both Nations Would Thus Obtain Outlined by Americans

By OTHEMAN STEVENS.

(Copyright, 1922, by Universal Service.)

Mexico City, Jan. 11.—The eye of business pierces the fog of statecraft and sees the material good from recognition of Mexico by the United States, which would carry with it the beneficence of amity.

The effective way to put Mexico in the place to which it is entitled is not by telling Mexico how to model its government on our "enlightened" principles, but by making people go to work because dollars go to work.

This is the gist of the group of statements given here from upstanding American business men. These men are members of the American Chamber of Commerce here, have been in business here for many years and speak with direct knowledge.

F. W. Teele is president of the Rotary Club, general manager of the tramway and power and light companies and president of the American School Foundation.

"Of course, I am for recognition, because Mexico is entitled to it," he said, and added, with a laugh:

"Mexico, through war needs, owes our companies about nineteen million pesos, but our confidence is such that we are spending six million pesos on our plants here for we know that the country is pulling out all right.

FINANCIAL CRISIS.

"All concede that Mexico is having a financial crisis, as is the rest of the world is having, but recognition would move to cure that to the advantage of both countries, and it would bring in its train such business activity and profit to both nations that what few little differences exist would be quickly adjusted. Delay in recognition is delay of the grand parade of mutual prosperity."

The house of Gerber has been existent in New York, I am told, for a century. It is an importing firm. F. E. Gerber having for many years directed the business there. This is what he has to say:

"We are all for recognition, for, if anything is needed thoroughly to strengthen the government here, that act would do it. It would result in the final conditions being created which investors and business men require. The future effect would prove a great help to both nations in working out their problems."

Oil men are understood for some secret purpose to be against recognition, but in J. C. Cantu, of the Caltex Oil Company, is found a man who sees without prejudice. His produces fifteen thousand barrels daily, and his opinion is:

PRAISES OBREGON.

"President Obregon is entitled to great credit for what he has accomplished, for the country is at peace, is meeting its obligations and is progressing constantly.

"Foreign capital is needed and will be so safeguarded by the government that investors may feel they have made no mistake. Capital knows the unequalled resources of Mexico, and only awaits the fact of recognition to cause an influx of capital and skill, the like of which will be something unknown before to business history.

"Showing that I have faith, as well as words, my companies have just put fifty tank cars, and are buying 150 more. We are building a plant in this city to produce 1,000 barrels of petroleum, and a depot for the sale of gasoline and lubricants.

"As to the talk about graft here, I say that I have made many contracts here and in no case, governmental or otherwise, have I given one centavo to any official or employe and none has been asked or suggested."

MEANS BUSINESS FOR U. S.

E. Kirby Smith, a son of the noted Confederate general of that name, has lived here as a business man for twenty-five years. He says:

"Recognition would thoroughly solidify the administration and thereby insure the conditions already brought about and insure confidence, for with it would come—and this is definitely known—enormous amounts of capital with business and industrial brains.

"Without recognition, Mexico can hardly get ahead, as the situation and the conditions give her a right to do. The longer recognition is delayed, the more will develop a lack of confidence and mistrust in both countries. With the invasion of capital and business activity generally, there would follow an inevitable settlement of all economic questions. It would mean instant big business in the United States as well as here."

If practical examples are wanted, E. G. Roeder, who came here from Cincinnati a quarter of a century ago and sells industrial and textile machinery, gives them when he says:

SALE ORDERS HELD UP.

"I can speak personally about what recognition would mean in one line of business in the United States. I mean machinery, such as I deal in. I have large orders which are held up awaiting the action of our government. The action of our government are holding back for that confidence which recognition would bring and the sales are thereby postponed.

"Recognition would in my case alone mean that the United States firm for whom I do business here would at once do an immeasurably larger business than they now do.

"More than that, official recognition would be immediately followed by banking accommodations for innumerable commercial and mercantile transactions.

If the State Department at Washington has any reasons for not wanting American business men to reap the harvest that awaits them in Mexico, why not tell them?

On This Rock We Stand

Hearst Papers Are ALWAYS and ONLY Pro-American

During the war the favorite indoor pastime of fireside warriors was to denounce the Hearst papers as pro-German and anti-British.

At the present time the favorite indoor pastime of the same kind of patriots is to denounce the Hearst papers as pro-Irish and anti-British.

We do not know how the mental processes of these fireside warriors and statesmen move, their wonders to perform. We have often thought it would be amusing and instructive to take one of their heads apart and see what is in them, or rather what isn't in them.

The Hearst papers are ALWAYS and ONLY pro-American.

None of these things has any place in our national life.

Whoever advocates a union of America with England or any other country is a misguided citizen, a dangerous citizen and a mighty poor specimen of independent American manhood.

We wish every people in the world well. We would have them—if we could—all be as happy and comfortable as our own people. We would be glad to see them all live in peace and security.

BUT WE ARE UNALTERABLY OPPOSED TO ANY POLITICAL ALLIANCE WITH ANY OF THEM—any political PARTNERSHIP with nations less honest, less peaceful, less prosperous, less safe and less solvent than our own.

That's our doctrine.

It is a good doctrine.

It is an American doctrine.

We get it from Washington.

We get it from Jefferson.

We get it from Lincoln.

We get it from the traditions of a most glorious past, from a history so splendid that the heart thrills at each new reading; from every good and wise American who ever had a part in making our America the wonder and envy of times present and of the ages that are to come.

It is the doctrine that is a religion with us—a creed.

We live to defend it.

We would not be at all unwilling to die for it, if that small sacrifice was necessary to its continuance.

And we do not doubt that we and the millions of Americans like ourselves are able to defend and will defend and maintain this true American doctrine against the wiles of foreign influence and the mean and base intrigue of domestic traitors to the traditions of the past, and then hand it down unimpaired to our sons' sons to defend and maintain, as long as the republic stands on its mighty foundations four-square to every storm of fate and destiny.

Propaganda and the Wets

Major Haynes Points to Few Figures

Major R. A. Haynes, in an address before the Law Enforcement League of Chicago, said some interesting things, among which is the following:

The wets have spread carefully planned propaganda to make it appear that the prohibition law is a failure and cannot be enforced. They put in capital letters the liquors imported into this country. The facts show that the total importation during the past fiscal year was one-half of 1 per cent of the total consumption of liquor in the United States the year before prohibition.

Propaganda says crime has increased since prohibition. Facts show that the crime wave is world-wide and that it would be just as sensible to blame it on woman suffrage as on prohibition. Facts show that arrests for drunkenness have decreased 60 per cent. in this country since prohibition, and convictions for drunkenness increased about the same per cent. in wet England.

Enough said!

That $2,000,000 Legacy

Garland Brothers Can Use It the Right Way

So the Garland brothers have changed their minds and will take their great legacy.

They had refused it because they believed that the social and economic system under which one man could get a million dollars while others could not get enough to provide them with the necessaries of life was a wicked system and that they should not profit by it.

This was a noble idea, but impracticable. The $2,000,000 which they inherited would not disappear from the face of the earth if they did not take it. It would be spent by someone who did not have their lofty social ideals, and might be spent to promote the very social system which they believed is wicked.

Now that they will take the money, they will be able to do some practical things to ameliorate the evil in our present social and economic system.

A part of the income of a million dollars could go a long way toward revolutionizing a bad, social system.

French Know Who Fought

General Sarrail, one of the most distinguished of the French strategists, who commanded the French forces at Verdun and the allied forces at Salonica, says: "The Americans won the war. Had the United States not intervened in 1917, we would have been lost."

Please contrast this with the boasting of the British officers in their accounts of the war. They all of one accord paraphrase an old saying, "The Americans also fought."

Emotions Unsafe Guides

It may be said concerning the controversy in Ireland over the acceptance of the compromise that while the judgment of the liberal world is with those who have compromised, their heart is with De Valera.

But it is the judgment which must guide the State, the emotions are unsafe guides.

WELL, here it is—just exactly as it was written.

I wouldn't cut a word of it for worlds—you might not get the honest, naive, innocent, well-meaning atmosphere of it if I did. "DEAR WINIFRED BLACK:

"Your many interesting articles have always furnished me with considerable food for thought. I have found that all of your topics embraced features which are of deep importance to the welfare of us all.

"I am therefore taking the privilege of recounting a life story which may prove interesting for countless young men and young women.

"This story deals with a young man who, after attaining wealth and marrying a young society girl, is ashamed of his father, an ordinary shoemaker. This is the story:

"The father was a widower. He deprived himself of many of the necessary things of life in order to give his son a better education. He sent him to college with a small sum of money, and through hard work the young man managed to pull through his college years.

Rich Friends

"While in college, the young man won as friends many wealthy young men, and through one of them he was introduced to a young society girl. In time he proposed and she consented to marry him.

"Now, most young girls, as you know, desire to know something about her fiance's parents. This young girl, therefore, asked him about his family, and he immediately put her off with the statement that his father was in business, not specifying what particular business he happened to be in.

"The young man, as was afterward proved, was exceedingly clever in evading the issue pertaining to his shoemaker father, but the cat came out of the bag when the young girl happened to meet a friend of her fiance who made known the actual status of her future father-in-law.

"At this point, you will infer that the young lady broke her engagement, but somehow she possessed a rather democratic nature and determined to ascertain the real character of her fiance's father.

"She learned that her future father-in-law was a shoemaker. She brought the question direct to her fiance, and received another evasive reply, and forthwith broke her engagement.

"It was then that the young man, deeply in love with the young lady, confessed that the reason why he did not tell her that his father was an ordinary shoemaker was because he was afraid that she would give him up.

"However, she was broad minded enough to understand his viewpoint, and said that it was not his father she was to marry, but him. In other words, she wanted him for what he was, and not what he pretended to be.

"I hope I have made the entire situation clear to you, and if there is a lesson for other young people in this incident, I hope you will write a story about it, and show the young folks that they should never be ashamed of their parents. I have often wondered how many of the young men who have been successful in life and the young women who have married wealth are ashamed of their parents because of their humble origin.

"Yours very truly,

"W. B. B."

"He's a Snob"

And this was written in America, in an American city, by a woman with an American name!

Dear me, when I saw the length of the letter I thought there was a murder in the family, or at the very least a penitentiary sentence—and all that was the matter was that his father worked for a living.

What a fool he was to try to make a secret of it! If I had been in the girl's place I would have suspected him, not because his father was a shoemaker, but because the young man was ashamed of his own father and tried to deceive me about him.

He's a snob, my dear—just a foolish, shallow-hearted snob—and that's all there is to it.

And before he's done with it I shouldn't wonder if the shoemaker father wouldn't have an hour or so when he may possibly be ashamed of his son.

This is America, not Europe!

No, you can't live in the way your shoemaker father-in-law lived. Why should you? You were brought up differently. But why make such a fuss about it? Who cares what your father or your father-in-law was, or is, or will be?

People of sense like you for what you are—and for no other reason on earth—and people without sense are not at all worth minding.

A HELPING HAND

In your home or business vicinity there may not be any children of poor parents, kiddies who are denied the good and wholesome things of life because their parents cannot afford them.

If you live in such a neighborhood you are more fortunate than most of us who would not have to go far to find girls and boys growing up in surroundings which cultivate a bad taste when different environment would bring out the really good which is latent.

Why not single out some child of this sort, more than one if you can afford it, and try to provide some elevating influence.

If a child grows up ignorant of any other mode of living than he finds himself he has no ideals and no high standards upon which to build as he grows.

His standard is no higher than he has seen or knows.

If every boy or girl, man or woman, would become personally interested in getting some good thing or some bit of enjoyment to at least one person a day, this would be a better old world.

Begin today to scatter kind acts and helpful deeds.

PAYING BACK

Many city people are entertained in Summer time by their friends in the country, but when the season is reversed they are not willing to reciprocate.

This is not a fair deal.

Your stay last Summer with your country relatives caused much inconvenience of which they said nothing.

No family lives exactly the same whether there is company or not, no matter what they say about the matter to make you feel good.

You owe that family something if you were entertained in any way last Summer and you should be thinking how to pay it.

Vacations are too often one-sided affairs.

Persons living in small towns like to visit the city, and while there they want to do more than inspect the "park system."

They want to see good plays, the opera, large public gatherings and the like, and you say "you cannot afford to take them."

Why did you not think of that when you had the cream of everything, while you were storing up health and strength with them?

Do not accept favors you cannot return in kind.

BARGAINS IN BERLIN ARE DRAWING WOMEN

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND.

Univ. Service Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, Jan. 10.—American women, ever bent upon "shopping explorations," have made a discovery—that Germany is a vast "bargain counter" and that Berlin has a "Rue de la Paix" for styles all its own. Some of them, annoyed by prices charged them in Paris and their exploring curiosity aroused by rumors of "wonderful bargains" and "fine things" of a new shoppin Eldorado in Berlin, "where a dollar will buy twice as much as anywhere else in the world," came from Paris to see if there was any truth in these legendary rumors. Above all they could not believe tha' anything German could be stylish.

They came, they saw, they bought. The small advance guard of "bargain scouts" was followed by others. Letters and articles brought back to Paris by wives and friends of members of the French missions in Berlin surprised even the French.

Price Wins Them.

French women came from Paris to get gowns and lingerie and furs. They would not admit that many of the things made by the "Boches" could compare with the French, no, no, but as to prices. Ah, with one franc buying 23 marks, one dollar 275 marks, one pound sterling a whole pocketful of 100-mark bills, how could Paris compete in prices with the Germans?

Berlin's "Rue de la Paix" of style shops is a product of the long war. It forced the Germans to a large extent to rely upon themselves for creative styles. It made for certain independence of the dictates of Paris as to what women should, really must wear. That independence has been developed since the revolution.

Today Berlin has things in which even Paris can compete neither in prices nor in originality. Two of these specialties American women declare are furs and sport clothes.

Berlin's "Rue de la Paix" is not one street, but a triangle, which has gradually gathered into its commercial embrace three of the city's former exclusive residence streets, hanging like a fringe to the green mantle of the Tiergarten.

In pre-war days the formal old world mansions, which even in their changed estate, retain their dignified and unbusinesslike physiognomy, housed the moneyed aristocracy of Berlin and many foreign diplomatic missions. But, like the Champs Elysees and Fifth avenue, the quarter has gradually succumbed to the monarch of business, plus art.

Lure the Shoppers

Today the discreet windows of the shops along these streets, promising more than the real, form a lure irresistible to the shoppers.

At present their wares are accessible only to two classes of feminine buyers—German "war profiteeresses" and foreign women fortunate enough to have the magic currency which can call "cheap" to be most staggering prices when expressed in marks. This thought is ever uppermost in the minds of both buyer and seller.

To "this chinchilla coat, made to order for an American woman, cost eight hundred thousand marks," there is quickly and adroitly added, "but what is that in your money?" And when you figure it out you find that it's not much over $3,000. For that you have a coat which before the war only Russian princesses of the blood could afford to wrap around their patrician limbs.

To the Editor

Call a Spade a Spade

Editor Boston American:

Your paper has repeatedly stated that the interests of our country are not being properly safeguarded in the disarmament conference now going on at Washington.

You have ascribed this alarming condition to the inefficiency, dulness and unskilled diplomacy of the American representatives.

Every intelligent American knows that as statesmen, Root, Lodge, Hughes and Underwood have no mental superiors in the world.

If there has been a betrayal of the people of America, it has been deliberate and the men responsible have committed treason.

Why not say so and seek their proper punishment?

THE PESSIMISTIC IDEA

"Prosperity is coming," says Postmaster-General Hays, "let us go out and meet it." Judging by their talk, a good many people are inclined to go out and meet it with a brick.

JUST NOW THEY ARE "WAITING TO SEE"

In about six months from now the country will be full of men who "might have made millions if they had followed their own judgment."

LET AMERICA SIT BY THE SIDE OF THE ROAD

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

APART from partisanship, it was impressive to find American opinion so nearly unanimous, in the Fall of 1920, that our country should continue her policy of relative aloofness.

That decision was all the more significant, because it did not imply any hostility on our part towards other nations, or an indifference towards world problems, or a desire for an impossible isolation.

We wanted only to make sure of disentanglement sufficient to maintain our traditional principle and policy of clean-cut freedom and independence.

Beyond that, as the Great Lover among the nations, America wished in a way to play the role of ancient Homer's hermit, who was a friend to man and lived in a house by the side of the road.

The late Sam Walter Foss of Massachusetts, a beautiful, loving type of the average American boy made this theme the subject of a poem, which he calls "The House by the Side of the Road."

His plea in that poem is not to live as a hermit-soul, dwelling apart in a fellowless firmament; but, from a house by the side of the road, to watch the race of men go by, to sympathize with every kind, and to be the friend of all.

That strikes us as just the right and wise spirit for each of us and for our country!

Frankly, our large population of Irish origin or descent feels a degree of hostility towards England; and many others of us instinctively resent what we sense to be a snobbish, patronizing, "including" attitude of Britain towards America.

As Friend of Man

We have no deep-seated antagonism towards England or any other country. No, not even Germany, which we shall again learn to appreciate and admire.

Indeed, as befits a people composed of elements contributed by all the peoples, we feel distinctly friendly towards all mankind. That is actually ONLY A SORT OF SELF-LOVE.

Better still, because we are beginning to benefit from the reflex influence of our professions, we are feeling the spiritual effect of our national religion of democracy. Therefore, it is becoming as easy as it is natural and proper for America to be a friend to Man.

If we shall not now, or in any visibly near future, join the League of Nations or form a new Association of Nations, that only means that we believe that our "playing a lone hand" leaves us free to be THE FRIEND OF ALL, ALWAYS AND THE FRIEND OF EACH IN TIME OF NEED.

For instance, if we are not officially tied to England, whether by open alliance or by secret treaty, then at least American public opinion—without Congressional action, which would be construed as unfriendly—can frankly and freely express our sympathy with the national aspirations of Ireland still farther.

Similarly, we can sympathize with the growing desire of India and Egypt for an increasing part in the direction of their own destinies and in the development of their own resources, for their own benefit, rather than for the support of England and the maintenance of the British Empire.

U. S. and Russia

So, too, we cannot actually, as a people, fail to feel friendly towards the great masses of Russia struggling to be free and to be democratically organized—whatever we may think of the present regime of presumably benevolent autocracy, but ridiculously misstyled a dictatorship of the proletariat.

At any rate, we are, as a nation, a friend to the Russian people; as we are sympathetic also with the Italians and the Greeks, the French, the Belgians, the Bulgarians and the Turks—whatever we may think of the momentary leadership in any of those lands.

And as for China—for that third of the human race we feel a really deep and protective friendliness, which we shall seek to make effective towards her salvation and the burgeoning of her vast human and material resources, in a rebirth which is to amaze and benefit the world.

If any nations have herein remained unmentioned, it is because they can be covered by a blanket good will, large enough to include and warm them all.

We are even glad to see a League of Nations, which will at last be a beginning of the inevitable federation of the peoples of other continents.

When that process has gone so far—perhaps 200 years hence—as to produce a United States of Europe and of Asia, of Africa and Australia, as well cemented as our United States of America, then we shall be ready to become a part of the United States of the world.

Meanwhile, we shall continue to dwell in our house by the side of the road—and we shall be busy on all the highroads of the earth—and always be a friend to Man.
